House Sends Relief Bill With Slash To Roosevelt

Cannon, Woodrum Argue $150,000,000 Cut; Differential Limit Is Defeated

By Robert C. Albright.

After three weeks of party-splitting controversy, Congress yesterday completed action on the $725,000,000 WPA deficiency appropriation and turned attention to permanent legislation completely revamping existing relief policies.

The House sped the curtailed WPA deficiency funds down the last lap to the White House. Approval followed last-minute defeat of the South's pay differentials amendment, limiting WPA wage spreads for the same type of work to 25 per cent. The House discarded its own amendment by a 252-to-140 roll call vote.

Strife over the $150,000,000 slash in the President's estimate persisted to the end as Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, and Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Virginia, ranking members of the House Appropriations Committee, crossed swords in debate.

Cannon Chides Woodrum

Cannon, advocate of the President's $875,000,000 figure, accused House conferees of "marching up the hill and marching down again" in approving Senate modifications, and chided Woodrum for his handling of the bill. Woodrum hotly retorted that "Congress is doing the legislating; the ultimate judgment of 436 members is what counts in legislation."

As the deficiency bill cleared the last legislative hurdle, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, announced he would proceed next week to draft "a bill or bills" formulating a permanent relief policy in conformance with recommendations of his special Senate Unemployment Committee.

Byrnes, who led the fight for the $150,000,000 deficiency bill cut in the Senate, and devised the formula finally approved, will draft a comprehensive program, with unemployment compensation "the first line of defense" and public assistance and public work programs revised and co-ordinated.

Byrnes Program

To be offered as independent legislation apart from regular relief appropriations, the Byrnes program provides:

For shortening of the waiting period for unemployment compensation to one week, lengthening of the benefit period to 13 weeks and benefits based on average earnings of a few standard crafts or skills.

Leaders May Urge President to Recall Name of Roberts

Administration leaders will request President Roosevelt to withdraw the nomination of Floyd Roberts, of Bristol, Va., to be judge of the Western District of Virginia, it was reported yesterday.

The rumored action, which could not be confirmed, was said to spring from the Senate Judiciary Committee's adverse vote on the nomination Wednesday, when Roberts was turned down, 15 to 3, because of the active opposition of Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia.

Meanwhile a potential battle over another Presidential appointment was deferred when Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, asked a Judiciary sub-committee to postpone consideration of the appointment of William S. Boyle to be United States attorney for the District of Nevada. McCarran has been represented as opposing President Roosevelt's choice of Boyle for the post.

'Bone-Dry' Capital Bill Again Bobs Up in Congress

Although it has lain dormant in the House District Committee files for almost four years, the "bone-dry" bill to prohibit the sale of all liquors in the National Capital bobbed up again yesterday on Capitol Hill.

Modeled after the Sheppard act, which was repealed with the return of beer and liquor to Washington, the measure is sponsored by Representative Guyer (Republican), of the "bone-dry" State of Kansas.

So far the District Committee has so completely ignored the bill that it has not even been referred to a sub-committee for consideration as is customary with other proposed legislation.

Dies Inquiry Wins Approval Of Rules Group

Fight for $100,000 Fund Goes to House Floor, Indorsement Predicted

Continuance for another year of Representative Dies' investigation into un-American activities was approved by the House Rules Committee yesterday without a record vote.

The bitter protests against the Dies group already voiced by several liberal Democratic representatives will be carried to the floor today in the hour's debate scheduled to precede House action on the Rules Committee's recommendation.

Indictment Predicted

Well-informed members of the House said the Dies Committee will receive overwhelming indorsement today and that an appropriation of $100,000 will subsequently be voted.

Chairman Sabath of the Rules Committee, an outspoken opponent of the Dies investigation, admitted the legislation would pass easily, but added, "so many people want to attack it that I may have to forego the pleasure of speaking against it myself."

Concluding the three-day hearings with a reply to the attacks made upon him and his committee, Dies asserted that "no committee can possibly do the work it ought to do when it is harassed and denounced by members of the executive branch of this Government."

The giant blond Texan, seated at the opposite end of the committee table from 72-year-old Sabath, angrily wagged his finger as he shouted, "Some of my witnesses say that they themselves—instead of the charges they had made about un-American activities—were investigated by the Department of Justice."

Corcoran Faces Major Operation

Baltimore, Feb. 2 (AP).—Thomas G. Corcoran, special counsel to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and known as "Tommy the Cork," of President Roosevelt's inner New Deal advisory family, will undergo a major operation at Johns Hopkins Hospital here tomorrow morning.

Public to Have Voice in Site Of Auditorium

Sen. Connally Favors Constitution Avenue, Promises Hearings

With two District auditorium sites approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, announced yesterday hearings would be scheduled "to determine what the public wants."

While declaring that he had no hard and fast personal feelings on the subject, the Texan expressed belief that the site on East Capitol street would be inconvenient for inaugural crowds.

"If the auditorium is to be built with Federal funds and aimed to fill specific Federal needs, I think the location should be near the Capitol. When we first started to work on the proposal I wanted it down near the Union Station on some of that property that needs improving. The District, however, owned the land on Constitution avenue near John Marshall place and that was the site specified in my bill," he said.

Several local groups are lining up behind the East Capitol Street site as more appropriate to home needs and more "feasible." They doubt the chance of getting $9,000,000 from Congress for the Constitution avenue building at this session, but are hopeful that some means of financing a $3,000,000 structure could be worked out—possibly with PWA aid.

Secretary Ickes, who helped select the downtown site and is PWA administrator, declared yesterday:

"It's just a question of selecting the best site," and maintained that he had no "personal interest in the auditorium dispute."

Anti-Martin Group Seizes Office

Bandits Shoot D. C. Bus Driver; Silent Pair Robs Beauty Shop

George Warder, 28, Capital Transit bus driver and son of Detective Sergt. Charles Warder, was shot in the left forearm last night by two colored bandits who fled with his cash box, change holder and an undetermined amount of money.

They were pursued by Patrolman C. F. Swann, of Second Precinct, who passed almost immediately after the shot was fired. He heard no shot, he said, but became suspicious when the men started running. They separated, and he followed one into an alley, recovering a glove, transfer book and the change carrier.

Warder drove his bus with one arm from Fifth and W streets northwest, where the holdup occurred, to the Georgia Ave.-V street terminal.

Two silent bandits collected $15 early last night from Thelma Ferrell, 24, of 2034 Thirty-fourth street southeast, operator in a beauty shop at 304 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. They entered, hands in pockets, and without a word handed her a note.

"Give me all your money," she read, "or I'll tear the place out."

A middle-aged colored man, arrested in connection with the robbery of Mervel A. Hutsler, of Arlington, Va., collector for the A. & W. Hot Shoppes, of $1,200 yesterday morning, was "positively identified" by Hutsler in a lineup last night. He was said to be a former employe of the Hot Shoppe chain.

U. S. Witness Stalls Trial Of Warrings

Tax Agent Leese Engages Defense In Word Duel Over Incomes

Furious but funny duelling between defense counsel and the star Government witness yesterday stalled the second trial of the three Warring brothers for conspiracy to hold out income taxes on the profits of their $2,000,000-a-year numbers racket.

H. Watson Leese, shy and slender internal revenue agent, responded to a grilling cross-examination by Harry T. Whelan with jibes of his own. More than once the nettled accountant took the floor away from all the lawyers to argue a point he thought was being obscured.

Justice Laws saw to fair play between the lawyer and Leese, but reproved the latter several times.

Leese Eighth Witness

Leese was the eighth witness heard yesterday by the 14 jurors—of whom two are alternates to replace jurors who become ill or the like—after District Attorney Pine opened the prosecution yesterday. Leese was still on the stand when court adjourned and the 1 woman and 13 men were taken away under guard. They will be sequestered until their verdict is in, to avert a mistrial.

On trial are Emmitt, Leo Paul and Charles Warring and Gordon L. R. Sadur, tax expert who prepared income returns for the huge Warring numbers operations. Their first trial took three weeks last autumn and ended with the jury hopelessly deadlocked.

Pine told the court the Government would show that the Warrings started the numbers racket on a shoestring in March of 1934 and ran it up into a business that covered as high as $8,000 a day in bets in Washington. He explained that those who play the numbers bet on a figure of three digits, on which the odds would be 1,000 to 1. The numbers operators pay 600 to 1, and sometimes smaller odds. The winning number was supposed to be determined by chance, from the prices paid at race tracks. A nickel bet which won would pay the player $30.

Bookkeeping Evidence

Pine said the Government would show that the Warrings kept no books until July 9, 1934, and that the income they reported was much less than what they spent on automobiles, real estate at 3900 Macomb street, a cottage at Colonial Beach, a boat, and living expenses. The Warrings reported only $5,400 profit—$1,800 apiece—for 1935, Pine said, when they covered $2,000,000 in bets and paid more than what they re-

Snow Covers Coast, But San Diego Calls It 'Soft Hail'

By the Associated Press.

The Nation's storm center shifted to the Far West yesterday while most of the other States enjoyed a breathing spell.

Snow and sub-freezing temperatures were reported in many parts of southern California and Arizona. Phoenix, Ariz., had its fifth snow in 20 years. Emergency crews freed 600 automobiles stranded on an inland highway between Los Angeles and San Francisco in the wake of a 6-inch fall. Warmer weather was in prospect, however.

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 2 (AP).—Chagrined members of the "Heaven on Earth" Club—they're climate boosters—shrugged into overcoats and pulled on mittens today. The temperature stood at 36.4 at 6:30 a. m. Some white flakes sifted down late yesterday, but the "Heaven on Earthers" called it "soft hail."

2 Litters of Bears Bless Zoo Here; Total Is Unknown

The stork that brings baby bears made two stops at the zoo yesterday.

One of the Kadiaks bore a litter and so did a European bear. Attendants were unable to tell the number of young in either instance, however, because mother bears have a habit of observing strict seclusion in the darkest recesses of their dens for the first week or so.

Only the cubs' whines betrayed their arrival. They probably weigh about one pound each.

Ramona, another Kadiak, is expected to become a mother again almost any day. Her cubs, however, will be distinctive from those that came yesterday because their father is a polar bear.

Board Given $1,695,000 Health Plan

Five-Year Schedule Listed in Program Includes 14 New Medical Centers

A five-year health improvement program involving an expenditure of $1,695,000 has been recommended to District planners by Col. Herbert B. Hayden, Health Department business manager, it was learned yesterday.

The far-reaching program, which includes many features advocated by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, has been presented to Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner and chairman of the Planning and Projects Board.

Six Recommendations

The recommendations follow:

A Northwest health center, estimated to cost $230,000, including $30,000 for acquisition of land.

A Northeast health center, to cost $220,000, including $20,000 for land.

A southeast health center, estimated cost $220,000, of which $20,000 is to purchase land.

Ten additional maternal and child health centers (can be rented) at a cost of $125,000.

A central Health Department building to cost $450,000.

In connection with the building for the Health Department, which has been assigned space in the new Municipal Center, Col. Hayden stated:

"If the Health Department is to occupy quarters in the new Municipal Center, there is no need to consider a central Health Department building. If, however, there is doubt about the department's occupying quarters in the Municipal Center, the construction of a central Health Department building is imperative and should rank No. 1 on the list of new quarters."

Hospital Quarters Criticized

Mrs. Roosevelt, following her visit to Gallinger Hospital, severely criticized the quarters available for the children in the hospital.

Dr. Ruhland has maintained for some time the need for better facilities in the kitchen at the institution. Under the Public Works program, more than $1,000,000 has been allocated for Gallinger Hospital improvements, but the kitchen improvements were not included.

Capt. Tansey explained the features of the program are used by his committee in planning the future needs of the District, and form a basis for future Public Works programs and District improvements.

Mystery Blasts Rock London Subway Stations

London (Friday), Feb. 3 (AP).—Explosions rocked two subway stations in the heart of London early today, apparently marking a renewal of the widespread series of bombing and sabotage acts authorities have attributed to Irish Republican agitators.

Bombs exploded in Leicester Square and Tottenham Court Road tube stations about a quarter of a mile apart in the center of London.

The explosions occurred just as service was beginning for the day and for that reason few people were about.

The ticket collector at Tottenham Court Road was injured.

Japanese Sub With 40 Aboard Sinks After Crash

Tokyo, Feb. 3 (AP).—(Friday)—The first class Japanese submarine, I-63, sank in Bungo Channel where the water averages 330 feet in depth with probably 40 men aboard yesterday morning, the admiralty announced today.

Rescue operations were begun at once.

The vessel sank after a collision with another submarine.

Morgenthau Says Stabilization Fund Disclosure Would Be 'Breach of Faith'

Dealings Secret

If the Treasury is forced to yield to Congressional demands that it disclose stabilization fund operations, it will break faith with governments co-operating under the tripartite monetary agreement, official sources revealed yesterday.

Secretary Morgenthau said at a press conference that this Government through the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund had acted as "agent" for other powers in exchange control operations.

He is willing, if Congress directs, he explained, to present to a Congressional committee, in public hearing, the stabilization fund data, but he expressed the opinion that it "would not be in the public interest to do so."

Others Would Object

"I know," he said, "that some of the other governments will object strenuously to releasing information relating to their business. We are operating for them with their money. Any indebtedness incurred in the operation by either party is settled at the close of business each day."

Officials later explained that monetary co-operation under the tritite agreement involved an understanding with participating powers that transactions on their behalf would be kept confidential. As a result, if the stabilization fund operations are divulged, publicity will be given to transactions which this Government has pledged not to disclose.

French Link Denied

Morgenthau took occasion to deny flatly suspicions of some Senators that the stabilization fund may have been used to extend credits to France to purchase airplanes in this country.

"The stabilization fund," he said, "is not being used, directly or indirectly, in any way whatsoever to help any country make any purchases of merchandise."

His comments on publication of stabilization fund operations adverted to a resolution offered by

King of Sweden Honors Goering

Berlin, Feb. 2 (AP).—King Gustaf V of Sweden today decorated Field Marshal Goering with the Grand Cross of the Order of the Sword With Chain, the highest Swedish military honor. The King, en route to France, stopped here for a one-day visit and received Goering at the Swedish Embassy for a long talk.

Views Plane Sales To France as Fair, Proper U. S. Policy

By Dorothy Thompson.

I GATHER from reading editorials and the comments of spokesmen of both parties—there are a few exceptions, of course—that the airplane question boils down to whether we shall just sell airplanes to France or whether we shall sell them with enthusiasm.

DOROTHY THOMPSON

The main attack seems to be directed against procedure more than fact. The President is accused of secrecy. The implication is that he has tried to put something over on the American public. I do not think that the facts justify this charge.

A French mission to buy planes in the United States has been here for several months. The first order for 100 Curtiss planes was put in about a year ago and was described in detail in the newspapers. It did not occasion a ripple, nor did the order of 500

Britain Opens Northern Route To U.S. Airlines

Relaxes Provision For 2 Nations to Start Service at Same Time

United States airliners, which soon are to open transatlantic service, will have two routes open to them as a result of State Department action announced yesterday.

The British government and Imperial Airways, it was announced, have granted permission for American planes to use the shorter northern route and land in England despite a 1935 agreement that planes of the two countries would inaugurate service on that route simultaneously.

Imperial Airways planes will not be ready before June, it is understood, while liners of the Pan-American Airways may be prepared to take off next month.

Several weeks ago the State Department, to make possible inauguration of services as soon as the American craft are ready, obtained a six-month permit for the United States machines to land in France, an arrangement which probably would mean flying via the Azores.

Meanwhile, a State Department conference designed to expedite the flying program continued until well after dark. In the office of Thomas Burke, chief of the Division of International Communications, Juan B. Trippe, president of Pan-American, met with Burke, the chief of his aviation section, Stephen Latchford, and representatives of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, to work out some of the remaining details.

Somewhere an announcer was speaking. And Blanche Rodman faced the biggest microphone she ever saw—she thought.

But it's frightening look grew less menacing with the swell of the orchestra's opening bars. Her eyes closed as she began:

"I have eyes to see with . . ."

Then Miss Rodman knew she also had a voice to sing with.

And the Students' Radio Workshop knew it had a program.

The next 30 minutes passed like so many seconds for the Workshop participants at WJSV's [illegible] and, according to reports, for the vast audience listening to the first of the series of all-student radio programs arranged by the Students' Radio Guild, Station WJSV, and The Washington Post.

The 7 p. m. broadcast opened a schedule of 16 programs to be given weekly by potential radio stars to be found in all of Washington's high schools.

Central High's talent launched the Workshop parade last night. Miss Rodman, of the deep soulful voice, was just one of the featured entertainers.

She opened a variety show that packed the allotted half-hour to the last second. The variety ranged all the way from the blues to swanky pianistics. And there was a thrilling drama, too, not to mention a

Concern at White House

President Roosevelt will leave Washington in two weeks for the Caribbean to learn at first hand how the Navy is prepared to defend the continent against attack from abroad.

Departing about February 18, he will watch the fleet maneuvers in the general area between Cuba and South America, maneuvers that would involve defense of the Panama Canal as well as of the continent. Three cruisers are being held ready for the trip, but the one that will carry the Presidential party had not been selected last night.

Meanwhile amid the furor into which international relations and his defense program have been thrown, the President last night was reported to have outlined to a House subcommittee at the White House yesterday how the canal itself could be bombed by one of the totalitarians states of Europe.

Fears Bases in Americas

Asked by members of the subcommittee on military appropriations how the United States could be in danger from a European enemy in view of the inability of aircraft to cross the Atlantic with full bomb loads, the President is reported to have told the group that by traveling light, enemy planes could establish a base in Latin-America, load up with bombs and then attack the Canal, key point of American defense.

Market Rallies 1 to 8 Points as Tension Eases

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—Stocks rallied 1 to 8 points today to the highest levels since January 21 in reflection of a lessening of tension in world trading quarters over the international political situation.

With the foreign scene relatively quiescent, traders centered their attention on the domestic scene. All sections of the list, except the building shares, moved forward briskly and closed around the highs for the session.

Utility issues met best demand on growing indications that a "peace" between the industry and the Government will be arranged soon to release a $1,000,000,000 utility expansion program.

Strong investment buying was noted in many high-priced issues, with American Telephone the feature on a 5¾ point rise to a new peak for more than a year at 158½. Ingersoll-Rand gained 8 points. Speculative buying also increased.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

'ROUND THE CLOCK

7:12 A. M. Wakened by a plane flying just above the trees across the road. Sounded like a bomber from Bolling Field, but it might be an early planeload of tired businessmen from New York.

Lady Marler
. . . cup of tea

8:19 A. M. Over to the 2,000-foot circle of the Naval Observatory grounds, 2 miles from our house, where Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations, lives in a quiet mansion on a hill overlooking Massachusetts avenue, which has just a slight suggestion of the quarter-deck.

10:30 A. M. At Harry Hopkins' press conference it dawned on me that a new reticence and caution has descended on him; now that he's in Commerce he's playing closer to his chest, like a businessman. But when the scribes egg him on he lets loose a few haymakers. Talked as if he had big stuff up his sleeve.

"—Hitler throws some woo"

11:10 A. M. Stopped in at the Willard for a cup of coffee with a diplomat, who told me that Hitler's servants have let it leak out that his friends sneak a variety of girls into his quarters, in the hope that he will fall in love, marry and settle down and relax. But he just makes speeches to 'em and sends 'em home.

12:17 P. M. Strolled past the White House on the way to the State Department and saw a dog standing with his forefeet on the stone base of the iron fence, gazing through the bars at the portico with exactly the same intelligent expression as a tourist's who is meditating on the grandeur and grief of the Presidency.

1:20 p. m. Late to lunch with the Overseas Writers, to hear our Ambassador to China, and was told a lurid tale (but not by the Ambassador) of a party in Georgetown to celebrate the fall of Barcelona, where bigshots who prefer fascism wore masks as they stepped on a picture of Stalin on the doormat. Just a lot of poppycock; there weren's any bigshots there.

2:05 P. M. Taxied to the Mall to broadcast nervously into the television camera and mike, down where the soldiers used to drill during the Civil War . . . Hurried back to the Press Club to see the receiving end of television, clear as a chromo. Magnificent! I could sit for hours watching people make faces via television.

2:48 P. M. Dropped in at the Senate gallery for a little oratory; like dropping in at a six-day bicycle race. The tourists listen as if the next word would bring water gushing from the rock. Kentucky's Logan is a grand old Roman in the classic American manner, a liberal with his feet on the ground.

"—his pants didn't match"

3:57 P. M. It was a three-cigarette press conference at the President's office, with several visiting scribes who lingered afterward to be escorted through the barrier of chairs to shake hands with Mr. Roosevelt. He greets his severest critics just about as affably as his supporters.

4:50 P. M. Up to the 10th floor of the RFC Building for a chat with Tommy Corcoran, whose offhand observations on Government would make illuminating lectures. Some college ought to hire him. His secretary, Peggy Dowd, has a new red hat which proves that red-haired girls can wear red admirably.

8:08 P. M. To the Canadian Legation for a cup of tea, where Sir Herbert and Lady Marler were entertaining a full house. I heard a Congressman's wife point to a diplomatic attache wearing striped pants and say it was a pity he wasn't paid enough to afford pants which match his coat. I think she was joshing.

short talk on student problems by a Central faculty member, and a verse of "Tenax Propositi,' 'the school song.

Robert Louis Stevenson's yarn, "The Sire de Maltroit's Door," has been read by thousands, and it has been enacted before hundreds of audiences. In giving it again last night the Workshop radio performers showed that the suspense Stevenson built up with words can also be sent through a microphone.

Then there was Bernard Alpher's explanation of "What's Wrong With Washington." The saying youth must be seen and not heard is all wrong, he said.

Joel Friedman sat down at the piano. And no one laughed because they knew he could play—his own stuff, to boot. For the Workshop's audience he gave his own arrangement of "Swanee River."

This piano solo was followed by a talk by Mrs. Martha T. Baker, of the Central commercial teaching staff, who told how students are trained in the modern school to be vocationally fit for careers.

The Workshop is expected to give students with special talents the opportunity to get real training in one of the vocational fields—that of radio.

"The Sire de Maletroit's Door," next on the program, was presented by this cast: Victoria Paul as Blance de Maletroit; Joe Hanainy as the Sire de Maletroit, Pete Smith as de Beauldeau, Jack Griffin as a priest, and Hal Farrell, a soldier.

Petite Frances Mullikin then brought the broadcast to a climax singing popular "Where the Lazy River Goes By."

The sponsors still call it a Workshop. But those who took part in the first session showed they could make the WJSV studio a place not only to work, but also to produce.

Western High's radio entertainers will take over the Workshop microphone at 7 o'clock next Thursday night. And in consecutive weeks all the other high schools in the city will have a turn.

While it all means 16 programs of all-student entertainment for the listeners, there is more than fun in it for the participants. There is a contest connected with the project.

Two schools furnishing the units (soloists or groups of entertainers), will be awarded Magnavox phonograph-radio sets when the series is over in June. One of the instruments will go to the unit judged most entertaining from schools in Divisions 1 to 9. The other will go to the corresponding unit from schools in Divisions 10 to 13.

The presentations will be judged by a board including: A. D. Willard, jr., general manager of WJSV; Shannon Allen, acting director, radio section of the division of information, United States Departmet of Interior; Nelson B. Bell, The Post's drama editor, and Ray C. B. Brown, The Post music critic.

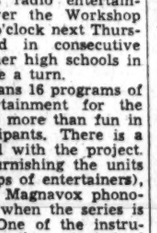
Washington, the Capital of our Nation, is a city of magnificent beauty, boasting architectural wonders and extensive parks. It is a virtual paradise to the visitor.



Alpher

But what of the 600,000 residents of this fair town? They live in a city that provides great opportunities for research and study, but which lacks proper facilities for their leisure time. In other words, Washington is backward civically. The phenomenal growth of this community has left civic development far in the background.

We lack a municipal stadium, an outdoor arena, an opera house, an amusement park, and much-needed bathing beaches. It is generally recognized that the acquisition of such institutions would bring additional revenue both to the District government and to its business men.

Philadelphia, New York, Pittsburgh St. Louis, and Los Angeles gain material benefit yearly from the huge throngs which crowd their cities to see sporting activities of various types. Washington, being unable to accommodate such activities, is naturally spurned by sports promoters. Chicago is able to raise huge funds for the support of its blind and crippled by holding annual charity games in its large Soldiers' Field Stadium. Washington, also nursing a public dependency problem, is unable to raise such funds and must rely on a none-too-sympathetic Congress for an appropriation.

Although we have our talented National Symphony Orchestra, and the Coolidge Quartet, opera-loving Washingtonians must be content with what little of such fare as they may secure via the airwaves. The addition of an opera house would readily entice some of the country's great artists to contribute their services.

Residents of Washington are, generally speaking, fairly well situated financially, and could generously support civic undertakings if given the opportunity.

The lack of a franchise has been a contributing factor in retarding such growth. A Congress, too busy to be bothered with our problems, has been another factor. And thirdly, the people themselves have failed to register a full-voiced complaint. It has been but recently that local citizens' organizations have begun to agitate for civic development.

Psychologists tell us that the manner in which an individual spends his leisure time is of great importance, or to put it into the words of the masses, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Beaches and recreation parks should not be miles from our city. They should be within easy access of the person who does not own an automobile and who can not spend several hours traveling to some resort.

Our neighboring City of Baltimore, no better situated than this city, has seen to it that her citizens have adequate recreational facilities, and as a result is a civically progressive community.

Let me say that the residents of Washington should make a concentrated effort to secure an appropriation from Congress, or to offer inducements to private capital to start the foundation of a Washington that will not only be the foremost city along political and esthetic lines, but a city that may justly point with pride to its civic progressiveness.

Stenography and general typing figure very prominently today in the vocational training field. The United States census for 1930 states that 9,083 stenographers and typists were then employed in the District of Columbia. There should be ample opportunity in Washington for persons adequately trained.

Mrs. Baker

The local high schools offer very complete courses, and despite many remarks to the contrary, these courses can adequately train students for stenographic and office work. At Central High School it is possible for a student to study shorthand and typewriting for three years.

This work covers the following: Approximately one year is devoted to the techniques—in shorthand, learning the alphabet and accumulating a vocabulary; in typewriting, mastering the keyboard and the mechanism of the machine. In the second and third years these two studies are combined into dictation for the most part and the transcription of that dictation. At the end of the second year students should be able to take dictation at a minimum of eighty words a minute and type at a minimum of 40 words a minute. The speeds for the third year become a minimum of 100 for shorthand and 50 words for typewriting.

The third-year work includes typing of all business papers, reports, pay rolls, checks, and the like, in addition to the regular letter and article work of both the second and third year courses of study. Such miscellaneous office duties as answering the telephone, meeting callers, making appointments, etc., are also covered. This training in its entirety should graduate students capable of filling satisfactorily the position of stenographer in any office.

There is a crying need, however, for vocational guidance, which should be made available to the students at the time they enter high school. Too few of our good students are not directed to start this work in time to get the full three-year course, and too many of our poor students are permitted to continue struggling through the three years when the record they made the first and second years indicates that they will never be capable of really good work in this line.

McReynolds Observes 77th Birthday; Bill Aimed at Cattle Rustlers

By the Associated Press.

Associate Justice James C. McReynolds, the Supreme Court's leading dissenter, is 77 today. Although a Democrat, Justice McReynolds has voted against Roosevelt Administration legislation more frequently than anyone else on the tribunal.

McREYNOLDS

Despite his years, he still drives his automobile and frequently goes duck hunting. He enjoys giving informal breakfasts for his friends.

There have been many reports of his imminent retirement, but he has given no indication that he would leave the bench. It is known that he has desired for sometime to quit, but felt it his duty to remain.

He was Attorney General in the Wilson Administration when appointed an associate justice in 1914.

Legislation to put Federal officers on the trail of the modern cattle rustler and horse theif was passed yesterday by the Senate.

The bill, introduced by Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, now goes to the House. It would impose a $5,000 fine, five years in prison, or both on persons convicted of transporting stolen animals in interstate commerce.

Chairman Herring (Democrat), Iowa, predicted the report of the Senate Profit-sharing Committee would "call attention to the benefits of profit-sharing," but would not recommend legislation of any kind.

The committee's staff, headed by Donald Despain, is working on the outline of the report which will give details of some 700 profit-sharing plans in operation.

"At first it was thought we might recommend compensatory partial exemption from taxes to business institutions which practice profit-sharing," the Iowan said. "But as we advanced with our hearings we found strong sentiment against this among employers."

The Senate passed a resolution denying former Senator George L. Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, pay after November 8, 1939. Berry claimed he should have been paid up to the time his successor took office.

A special Senate committee arranged yesterday to hear testimony from Secretary Morgenthau Tuesday on the operation of the domestic silver purchase program.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the committee, said that criticism of the purchase program had made a thorough study of the study of the subject advisable. Pittman and other silver-State Senators recently urged an increase in the 64.64-cent price, which President Roosevelt has continued by Executive order until June 30.

The Gallup Poll

Public Opinion in U. S. and England Against Return of German Colonies

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, Feb. 2.—Hitler's demand for the return of Germany's former colonies, a demand reiterated in his speech before the Reichstag last Monday, meets with the strong opposition of public opinion in both the United States and in England, according to surveys conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion in this country and by the British Institute in England.

GALLUP.

Some international observers argue that restoration of Germany's colonies might satisfy the national aims of that "have not" nation, and make for peace in Europe. But this view is apparently not shared by the majority of American voters. Their typical comment is that Hitler "would not be appeased," that he would "only demand more." In England a majority even go so far as to say they would fight rather than hand back any of the possessions which Britain won from Germany as a result of the World War.

The survey of voters in the United States was completed this week on the question: "Should the colonies taken from Germany after the World War be given back to her?" An earlier survey was conducted a year ago on the same question, and the results compare as follows:

	Today.	Year Ago.
For returning colonies.	17%	24%
Against	83	76

In England a vote was taken by the British Institute of Public Opinion last October. It is interesting to note that, although Britain took many of the former German colonies and America took none, opinion in the two countries is virtually identical. British voters were asked: "Are you in favor of giving back any former German colonies?" The results were:

Vote in England

For returning colonies	15%
Against	85

In a companion question those Britishers who opposed restoring the colonies were asked whether they would fight rather than give them back. More than 80 per cent said they would.

Germany's former colonies, nine in all, comprise an area nearly six times larger than the Reich. Those voters in the American survey who think this area should be returned argue that the lost colonies would help provide an economic "life line" for the Reich, which would satisfy Hitler and bring peace. A few declared that the territory rightfully belongs to Germany in the first place and should be restored, while others said they favored restoration "if Hitler would agree to purchase the colonies."

The majority, however, indicated a marked dissatisfaction with the policy of appeasing the dictators.

Leaders See Few Changes In Farm Act

Wheeler Advocates Price Fixing as Bar To Status of Peasants

While dairymen and farmers from the Middle West testified at a public hearing on the "cost of production" bill designed to replace the present farm act, Secretary Wallace and chairmen of Congressional agriculture committees yesterday continued their unsuccessful struggle with the Nation's cotton surplus problem.

"There were as many views as there were men present," the Secretary of Agriculture declared as he emerged from the three-hour executive conference. He said he listened "with great respect," but offered no plan of his own and did not think any "real consolidation of ideas" had been accomplished.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, maintained, however, that opinion seemed definitely lining up behind the plan suggested by him and Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, to take upwards of 4,000,000 bales of the 14,000,000-bale surplus and "give it back to the farmers in lieu of parity payments." The financial angle he declared to be the "thing causing the most trouble."

Danger of Peasant Status

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, speaking at the "cost of production" hearing, declared American farmers are in danger of being reduced to the economic status of peasants unless the Government approves price fixing for farm products.

"After all," he said, "everything is on a price-fixing basis in this country except the farmer."

The "cost of production" bill is sponsored by Wheeler and 16 other Senators. Senator Wheeler said he would want the price-fixing tried out for two or three products before applying it generally.

Despite trend of testimony at the hearing, however, it appeared improbable to leaders that any major changes would be made in the present farm act this year.

Change Seen Unlikely

The Administration is expected to offer a few amendments to improve its operation.

"If there are going to be any major changes in the crop control act, I think they probably won't be effective this year," Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said.

Representative Hope (Republican), of Kansas, said: "While there is a great deal of opposition to the present act, it comes from such divergent sources that it seems to me unlikely opponents will be able to effect any immediate major change."

Administrator Needs Curiosity, Brownlow Says

The administrator is a "trustee of democracy," Louis Brownlow, chairman of the President's committee on administrative management, told 450 members of the Department of Agriculture yesterday in the department's auditorium, Fourteenth and Independence streets.

Brownlow described a good administrator as a man with insatiable curiosity, modified by self-reliance. He should know when to ask the "last necessary question," and when to make decisions on the basis of what he already knows. He should know a little about everything, getting detailed information from specialists, but could not delegate important decisions concerning finance, personnel, or planning, said Brownlow.

The lecture was the first of four weekly talks, sponsored by the graduate school of the Department of Agriculture.

Mulry Renews Weinberg Slaying Hint

Dewey Silent on New Charges as Hines' Trial Proceeds

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—The question of how George Weinberg died—whether by his own hand or another's—persisted today as the cross-examination of the late gangster's earlier prosecution testimony against James J. Hines was reenacted in the Tammany district leader's second policy racket trial.

For the purposes of General Sessions Court it was sufficient merely that Weinberg was dead. A polite, baldish defense assistant, "doubling" for Weinberg in the witness chair, read off the answers the gangster gave on cross-examination in Hines' first trial last summer. Chief Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker put again—to a dead witness by proxy—his questions of that trial.

Meanwhile, George E. Mulry, the Long Island lawyer who intervened in the Weinberg affair yesterday with a telegram to Gov. Lehman suggesting an investigation of the fact no fingerprints were found on the pistol which killed Weinberg last Sunday, posed still another question to the Governor.

In his second telegram Mulry said:

"Information is that no evidence of (powder) spray on Weinberg's hands indicating that he had recently discharged a revolver, nor was any test made of any other hands in home on Sunday. (This referred to the fact Weinberg died in a Westchester County house, where he was in custody of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's detectives, the official finding having been that he slipped a revolver from the coat of one of his guards and killed himself.)

"A reporter reputedly has determined that the homicide revolver was in possession of an individual police officer for 48 hours subsequent to death. These matters should also be confirmed."

Dewey made no comment. Yesterday he had dismissed it all as "crack-pot" stuff and subsequently he told Gov. Lehman in a tart telegram that Weinberg's suicide had been established beyond any doubt.

2,750 San Quentin Food Strikers Fed Bread in Cells

San Quentin, Calif., Feb. 2 (AP).—Some 2,750 hungry, sullen convicts still on strike, ostensibly against San Quentin Prison's menu, remained in their cells today and ate bread while Warden Court Smith worried about what he termed a potential "powder keg" situation.

More than half the prison's population of 5,250, supposedly the largest convict group in the United States, was on strike.

The warden expressed the belief food was not the real issue. Complaints against the menu, he said, were vague.

Home Users' Share in Rate Cut $141,500

Commercial Power Consumers Will Save $252,500 in 1939

Residential consumers of electricity were awarded savings totaling $141,500 during the ensuing year as their share of the $394,085 rate-cut ordered last week by the Public Utilities Commission.

Based on the sliding scale arrangement with the Potomac Electric Power Co., the new rates will be applied to all bills rendered beginning today.

Commercial users of power will receive an aggregate reduction of $252,500.

The new schedules are as follows:

Residential "A": For the first 46 k. w. h. of monthly consumption, 3.9 cents; for the next 80 k. w. h., 1.7 cents, and for electricity consumed monthly in excess of 126 k.w.h., 1.5 cents.

Commercial "E": For the first 80 k. w. h. monthly consumption, 3.8 cents; for the next 400 k. w. h., 2.3 cents; for the next 5,220 k. w. h., 2.1 cents; for the next 33,050 k. w. h., 1.3 cents; for the next 150,000 k. w. h., 0.7 cents, and for excess over 188,750 k. w. h., 0.6 cents.

Brulatour Pleads Guilty to Illegal Possession of Gun

New York, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Jules Brulatour, wealthy film manufacturer, today pleaded guilty to illegal possession of the revolver with which he says he accidentally shot himself in the neck ten days ago.

"I am weak on my pins," Brulatour told newspaper men, "but you've got to go through with these things."

The probation department was given a week to prepare a report before sentencing, scheduled for February 10.

Brulator's version of the shooting was that he was examining the gun when it went off. This did not satisfy police; and his wife, Hope Hampton, former actress, refused to waive immunity in order to testify before the grand jury.

Educator Asks U. S. to Cement Ties to South

Dr. Sheehy Points to Good Radio, Cinema and Press Can Do

Strengthening of the ties between North America and South America through press and radio services, the cinema, church relations and tourist travel was recommended last night by Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religious education at Catholic University.

Dr. Sheehy, who with Bishop James H. Ryan, of Nebraska, recently concluded an 18,000-mile plane tour of South America, gave his impressions and recommendations in an interview over the Columbia Broadcasting System. His first conclusion was, he said, that the United States is "strong" in South America.

Movies Termed Aid

"A second conclusion of Bishop Ryan is," he continued, "that since South America is Catholic by tradition and faith, it is elementary common sense to stress the spiritual bond between North and South America. There is no suggestion of religious intolerance in that statement. Wherever he went, Bishop Ryan pleaded also for a sympathetic attitude toward European refugees, particularly the Jews.

"A third conclusion is that we must do more than we are doing educationally in exchange of professors and students between the Americas.

"Fourthly, the movies are doing a great deal to teach South Americans the English language. The motion picture industry could do a great deal more to promote goodwill by making pictures with South American locales, using as their subject matter South American heroes such as Bolivar, Pizarro, O'Higgins.

Radio's Power Stressed

"Our press services in order to offset the vicious propaganda of the German subsidized Transocean News Service must give free service to South American newspapers, which are impoverished and using Transocean News Service simply because it is free.

"Radio is in its infancy in South America. The high-powered German stations have made it difficult, almost impossible, to get American programs. We must exchange radio programs with the countries of South America."

Dr. Sheehy said that America's foreign policy should be looking southward instead of to Europe, and he added that America's tourists should be looking in the same direction.

Invasion Not Feared

Buenos Aires, Feb. 2 (AP).—President Roberto M. Ortiz, in an interview today, said Argentine was in no danger, either immediate or remote, of invasion or even subtle penetration by the armies or doctrines of Europe's totalitarian states.

At the same time the chief executive declared a way must be found to re-establish United States and Argentine trade on a more equitable basis.

Girl, Both Legs Amputated, Will Earn Living By Sale of Hosiery; To Start in Hospital

Friends Seek Artificial Limbs, Suitable Home For Martha Geesling

Martha Geesling, 21, one of the few women alive today after undergoing amputation of both legs at the hips, hopefully looked forward yesterday to a business career.

In her ward bed at Emergency Hospital, where she has been a patient since last July, Martha made plans with her advisers to start paying her own way through life as a hosiery saleswoman.

The hospital has granted permission, it was learned, for her to take orders in her room not only from personnel but also the general public. She will "open shop" in a few days, after her sample line has been received and she has completed an elementary sales course.

Because of house rules against commercial agents, the representative of the hosiery company was not permitted to coach Martha in person. A volunteer social worker relayed the instructions to the patient.

Dr. G. W. Leadbetter, who last summer removed the girl's legs, useless as the result of a sandbank accident when she was 9 years old, last night expressed enthusiasm over her plans. So did Mrs. Myrtle Larson, social service head at Emergency, who is Martha's "co-ordinator."

Except for "pressure sores," the patient has recovered and she will leave the hospital as soon as a good home is found for her, where she can build up her hosiery business.

The matter of her future residence and the problem of supplying her with artificial limbs offer fresh complications, her friends admitted yesterday. She has been a ward of the District Government ever since the childhood accident but now that she is of age "there seems to be some buck passing," Dr. Leadbetter said.

He asserted that, as far as he is concerned, she is still a District ward, having entered the hospital and been placed under his care before she was 21 and since she cannot be said to be "cured" until artificial limbs are furnished.

McKesson Canada Unit Sold Million In Stock to Public

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Rowley W. Phillips, a director of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., said today sales of stock of McKesson & Robbins, Ltd., of Canada, with a face value of $1,020,000 had been made to the public, while the Canadian concern now has tangible assets of $68,000.

But, he said, added to these tangible assets were accounts receivable, English sales rights and guarantees by the parent American company. These guarantees, it was explained, might prove of substantial value if the parent concern is successfully reorganized.

Phillips came here to testify before the Federal grand jury investigating the affairs of the late F. Donald Coster-Musica, the president of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., who committed suicide after disclosures he was responsible for an $18,000,000 overstatement of its assets.

Roosevelt Says Attack on Canal Is Possibility

Defense

national defense, as provided in the proposed program, can the United States be definitely assured against such a possibility, the President is said to have added.

Accounts differed on what the President said as to where the bombs would come from. One source declared that he had said that location of a base would be with the aid of some Latin nation friendly to the invader, while others said that this was not discussed.

Planes for France Discussed

Members said that a number of questions were put to the President as to the defense of the Nation against attack from abroad, and that he discussed the situation at some length. The question of the sale of military planes to France came up and it was said that when the President was asked for his views on selling planes to Germany and Italy, as well as to the democracies, he declined to answer.

It was stated, however, that the group was convinced that the President had no intention, in aiding Great Britain and France, of entering into an alliance with them.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative J. Buel Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, was with the President for more than an hour. Chairman Taylor, of the full House Appropriations Committee, who accompanied the group, said they talked over the "technical details as to the world situation and what this committee is considering."

Republicans Assail Him

Meanwhile the debate over foreign policy aroused by the President's remarks to the Senate Military Affairs Committee earlier in the week continued unabated.

Nine Republican members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee issued a statement declaring they "deplore and protest the unneutral actions and secret methods employed by the President" in connection with the sale of planes to France.

Declaring that they have no objection to the sale of planes to any nations with which the United States has diplomatic relations, the group declared that the "secret methods" would not have been known to the American public except "for the accidental injury of a French flying officer in an American Army test plane."

The statement was signed by Representatives Fish, of New York; Eaton, of New Jersey; Rogers, of Massachusetts; Barton, of New York; Chiperfield, of Illinois; Corbett, of Pennsylvania; Vorys, of Ohio; Stearns, of New Hampshire, and Schiffler, of West Virginia.

Pittman Defends Him

Senator Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared that the President had not violated the traditional American policy of non-alliance, non-intervention and non-interference and said that war could only be prevented if a balance of power is restored between the dictatorships and democracies.

Senators McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Vanderburg (Republican), of Michigan, demanded that the President state his policies and plans to Congress and the people, and Representative Fish, ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, charged that the President was attempting to scrap traditional American policies of neutrality and involve the country in "foreign entanglements and war commitments."

Secretary of Interior Ickes hit back at the Administration critics, declaring that "there is no danger of this country being involved in war under this Administration." Answering criticism of the President by former President Hoover, he called the latter a "heart-broken and disappointed man" and advised him "not to misrepresent things" or become an "alarmist when there is no provocation of it."

Called Over Funds

The conference with the military funds group was said to have been called because of misgivings of some members as to the increase in annual appropriations which the expansion will require. War Department witnesses have testified in executive session that the yearly upkeep cost of the enlarged Air Corps alone would be $230,000,000, five or six times the present cost.

In this connection there has been considerable discussion in the subcommittee of the possibility of curtailing the cost of the program by either reducing the number of planes to be procured or by keeping more in reserve than is contemplated under the War Department program.

Administration officials point out, however, that the program calls for keeping more than 2,000 of the new planes in reserve, and declared that storing a larger number would not be economical. It was also stated that the President's plan provides for expanding the capacity of industry to produce planes and other munitions and it is well balanced in this respect.

Accounts as to the amount of opposition in the committee to the program differed. While one source indicated that but two members of the eight-man sub-committee were willing to go along all the way with the President's program, Democratic members denied this, and emphasized that the $552,000,000 plan is not even before the group as yet. The greater part of the program is before the legislative committees of the House and must be authorized before the funds can be appropriated. The sub-committee plans to have the regular Army appropriation bill ready by week after next and then provide for the emergency program in a supplementary bill.

Asked if there was any opposition to the program in the sub-committee, Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, said he knew of none.

"I think the proposed program is nothing more than adequate national defense," he declared. "It is simply what the War Department has proposed for many years. If we do not maintain our defenses as the program provides, we may some day be called before a Munich conference and have to accept terms that will cost us much more than the President's program."

The Senate Military Affairs Committee meets this morning to vote on a motion offered by Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, to make public testimony taken in executive session on the French plane purchases. Clark has promised to refute the contentions of Administration leaders that the sale of planes would aid United States defense, if the record is published. A majority of the members are said to favor publication of the testimony, including supporters of the President.

Meanwhile, Naval officials continued testimony before the House Naval Committee on the proposal to build air bases and develop aviation facilities at Guam. Representative Maas (Republican), Minnesota, who stated yesterday that he had information Germany was fortifying one of the Caroline Islands, formerly a German possession and now held by Japan, said that the data he had, indicated that the Nazis were continuing construction of a bomb-proof submarine base started prior to the World War.

The War Department announced yesterday that Brig. Gen. Barton K. Yount had taken charge of the training of the 30,000 additional pilots and mechanics required in the expansion of the Air Corps. Gen. Yount, former commander of the Air Corps training center at San Antonio, Tex., became chief of the new Training and Operations Division at the War Department, set up to handle the emergency program.

King Denies Commitment

Ottawa, Feb. 2 (Canadian Press). Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said today that exchange of information between military authorities of Canada and the United States for defense of the North American continent was "most desirable" and that "I have not the least doubt there has been an exchange of information."

He denied, however, that there was any commitment or arrangement for joint defense.

Refugees' Camera Sales Held Injuring Reich Trade in U. S.

Damage to legitimate German trade with the United States in expensive cameras, lenses, and binoculars that has been brought about by the Reich's refusal to allow emigrants to take money out of the country, was described here yesterday by Government officials and members of the camera trade.

The latter included the Washington representative of one German agency that has been co-operating with the customs service to protect itself from competition from its own factory's products, brought in by refugees and put on the market in many cases illegally.

This representative was F. P. Mulgannon, manager of the Washington branch of E. Leitz, Inc. His agency handles the Leica camera for its German manufacturer, and he laughed at the suggestion that the German government might have encouraged bringing in such goods by refugees in order to dump a surplus on the American market.

"Serious Inroads on Trade"

"The German firms of E. Leitz, and Carl Zeiss have excellent markets in a number of countries for their cameras and lenses, built up over a long period of time," he said. "Cameras that have been put on the trade within recent months by German refugees are spoiling the market. They are being offered sometimes at half their established price, and have made serious inroads in the trade in several cities.

Customs officers said the situation is under some control in such cities as New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and Baltimore.

The traffic has been moving into smaller cities, Mulgannon stated, however. He added, "I understand that in Pittsburgh lately a man was found with a peddler's license canvassing business buildings with German cameras ordinarily selling for as much as $200, which he offered for sale in the neighborhood of $100. The business has even reached as far as the West Coast."

As described by Mulgannon great quantities of the cameras have been brought in by refugees in lieu of currency. For some time each member of an arriving family occasionally brought an expensive camera. At first accepted by the customs as their personal possessions, and not for sale, such goods were admitted duty free.

Later, however, many cameras were found to be on sale by what one Treasury official yesterday described as "fly-by-night camera shops" at prices considerably below the market.

In some cases, it was suggested by Mulgannon, shady dealers approached immigrants with propositions in order to get cut-price products.

Instances of sales attempted by refugees were reported yesterday by J. G. Harris, manager of Edmonds Photo Supply House, 919 Fifteenth street northwest. "We do not handle them," he said, "but the fact that they are on the market has hurt our sale of imported cameras seriously."

Some cases, a customs official said, are plain attempts to evade the customs. It was stated inspectors had detected cameras being passed secretly by immigrants to friends at the pier.

Binoculars, telescopic lenses and other items of high value have entered the same picture, it was stated.

"A great deal of the goods brought in by immigrants are brought in duty free without any illegality," one official stated. "Some come with enough clothes to last for ten years. Another family brought a couple of hundred pounds of soap. Some bring whole vanloads of possessions."

Shipments Registered

Seizures of cameras have been made in New York and other large centers, it was reported. Recently an arrest was made in Mobile, Ala., where cameras brought in duty free were advertised at low prices in the press. The advertisement was followed up by Treasury inspectors. Customs inspections have been tightened.

German agencies are registering all their cameras and lenses with the customs. Unless certificates showing payments of duty are supplied with cameras offered for sale, a Treasury official said yesterday, they may be subject to seizure.

House Sends Relief Slash To Roosevelt ordination with related agencies and establishment of one office where a worker can register for unemployment compensation and obtain employment assistance.

Fifty per cent Federal contributions toward assistance of the aged, the blind and dependent children, with the Federal contribution increased for those States where the average per capita income is less than the average for the country.

One public works program, embracing similar activities of the PWA and the WPA under one department of public work, or under such a division in a department. Work of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration also would be placed under this department.

Hatch Drafting Laws

Tying into this program, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, already has started work on permanent legislation divorcing politics from pay rolls of the Federal Government and related State agencies.

Thrust temporarily aside by emergency demands for the five-month WPA appropriations, the program will be moved before various Senate committees before work starts on regular relief appropriations for the next fiscal year.

The deficiency bill sent to the White House yesterday not only cuts the President's estimates from $875,000,000 to $725,000,000, but provides no more than 5 per cent of the present 3,000,000 on WPA rolls can be dismissed in February or March. The President was authorized to ask for more funds if the spring business improvement fails to take up the slack. A WPA investigation and purge from its rolls of those not in need of relief was ordered.

Rebuff to the South

Reconsideration by the House yesterday of its amendment directing WPA to make no pay differentials in excess of 25 per cent for the same type of work was a rebuff to the South, which claims WPA wage discrimination. Conferees disagreed on the amendment and the Senate refused to accept it. On a teller vote the amendment was discarded, 104 to 100, and on a roll call the action was confirmed, 252 to 140.

Charging the $725,000,000 bill was full of inconsistencies, Representative Cannon said the conference compromise made impossible the economies asked by limitations on dismissals in the next two months. He called it "the most remarkable retreat" he had ever seen, and alleged that two Republican members of the conference "dictated the terms of the agreement."

Woodrum denied there had been "dictation" by anyone. He declared seven of the eight Democrats on his subcommittee had approved the cut, and the final agreement should "make everyone happy," even Cannon.

Woodrum States Power

When Cannon retorted that a majority of the Democrats in House and Senate voted for the President's figure, Woodrum shot back that 435 members of the House were doing their own legislating.

"Congress," said Woodrum, "has certainly established one principle which I hope it will never retreat from, and that is that the legislative body can legislate and that it does not ever have to delegate those powers to the Workers Alliance or to the Mayors' Conference."

The debate between the two Appropriations Committee rivals became personal as Cannon charged Woodrum's subcommittee brought the bill up in such a way that a record House vote was denied. Woodrum called this "the most fanciful, the most fantastic, the most childish proposition." He said a majority of the House during any time the bill was being considered could have raised the amount to the President's figure.

"Lone and Valiant Fight"

The Virginian said Cannon made "a lone and valiant fight for the $875,000,000, backed up by the Workers Alliance and the Mayors' Conference." Cannon snapped back that he was supported by the "leaders of the Democratic Party in this House and the Democratic leaders in the Senate."

Congress properly assumed its responsibility in setting the $725,000,000 figure, Woodrum said, adding:

"The President can come back for more if he wishes to. It was not necessary to put that in the law. Whether Congress will appropriate it is a legislative function for Congress to say at the proper time."

Stabilization Publicity Held Breach of Faith

Morgenthau

Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, calling for a public investigation of fund transactions.

This country began monetary cooperation with Great Britain and France following a major slump in the franc on September 25, 1936. The understanding announced at the time by the three governments has been known as the "tripartite agreement," although Belgium, Switzerland and the Netherlands joined afterward.

The Treasury, it was learned, has acted as agents for all these powers through the stabilization fund as well as for certain other governments, including a few in the Western Hemisphere.

Senatorial suspicions that the fund had been used to extend credits to France for airplane sales puzzled some of the experts. In other quarters, the statement was made that certain Senators were "seeing things under the bed."

Fear Giving Tips

Officials said disclosure of the operations of the fund would reveal nothing startling from the standpoint of lay interest. The information, however, it was pointed out, would provide valuable tips for international currency speculators.

The operations of the fund, officials said, are confined to transactions in currencies and in monetary metals. Gold is freely exchanged with foreign governments through the fund.

Morgenthau said disclosure of fund transactions would lessen its usefulness. This country would be embarrassed in monetary cooperation with friendly nations in the future.

Audited Yearly

Morgenthau said the fund was audited once a year by three Treasury employes who had been in the civil service for 27 years or more.

He would not say whether the cumulative profit of the fund was $12,000,000, as announced by Senator Barkley (Kentucky), Democratic leader.

If Congress should demand an independent audit of the fund, Morgenthau said, it would be "the least of my worries," although he declared this would amount to an "insult" to the civil service employes who now audit the fund.

U. S. Witness And Warring Defense Argue

Warring

ported their own share was to many of their four-score henchmen.

Emmitt Warring admitted paying $13,000 in bribes to policemen in 1935, Pine said, and this protection money was hidden in the accounts.

Former District Attorney Rover, who is defending Charles and Leo Paul Warring, clashed with Pine over his statement that the Government regretted the inconvenience occasioned the jurors by having to be locked up when court was not in session. Pine said he would try to hasten the prosecution. Rover protested that such a promise was improper and promised the defense would hurry too, so the jury would not be sequestered long.

Seven witnesses who swore they saw the Warrings sign income tax returns and other documents testified 5 or 10 minutes each. Leese, who lives at 3726 Warren street northwest, took the stand when the afternoon session began at 1:15 p. m. Assistant District Attorney Wilson questioned him.

Leese told how he was assigned to audit the Warring income tax reports and of a long series of conferences with Emmitt Warring and with Sadur in which they tried to find some way to make the returns balance with what the Treasury agents thought the income was.

Rights Held Violated

Leese said the Warrings brought their account books and papers which were photostated by the Treasury. Attorney Whalen objected to all this testimony. He claimed it violated the Warrings' constitutional right to be exempt from giving evidence against themselves. They gave the information, Whelan said, only because they were asked to supply it "for income tax purposes," and they were assured that the police would never see it.

"Well, as a matter of law," asked Justice Laws, the agents have a right to these papers, haven't they?"

Whelan disagreed but was overruled.

Leese resumed his story of the interviews, quoting Emmitt Warring as saying police bribes cost $1,000 a month in 1935 and describing the visit of Treasury agents to the Warring headquarters, then at 2510 K street northwest, to count $30,000 in the gang safe.

Leese testified that he asked who were the policemen who were paid the bribes, because he wanted to see if they had paid income taxes on them. "They were income," he declared.

"Who brought up those bribes, you?" snapped Whelan.

"No. It was another agent," Leese retorted. "Prior to that time I never knew cops took anything but apples and bananas."

Laughter Fills Court

A roar of laughs filled the court, in which Whelan joined. "Where are you from?" he finally asked.

"Don't you read the newspapers?"

Justice Laws commented that he thought this cross-examination was getting rather far afield.

Whelan resumed his questioning, pausing shortly afterward to complain that Leese was not responsive in his answer.

"Well, all I want to do is tell the truth," Leese protested. "I tried to ask you about a question awhile ago—I said 'pardon me,' but you went right ahead and I got jumped on."

"You were jumped on quite a lot in the previous trial, weren't you?" Whelan reminded.

"Yes; and I expect I'm going to go on being jumped on in this one."

Whelan and Leese spent 15 minutes debating whether Leese told Emmitt Warring it was "important" to save his adding machine slips. Leese insisted that was what he meant and that the Warrings didn't save them.

Occasionally, when harassed about the routine of his office, he prodded the defense with reminders that Whelan and William B. O'Connell, associated with him as Emmitt's counsel, had negotiated other cases with the revenue office. "You know perfectly well what the practice is," he would insist.

O'Connell observed the proceedings closely, but left most of the floor work to Whelan, as did Rover and Irvin A. Goldstein, counsel for Sadur.

The third day of the trial will start at 10 a. m. today.

Gayda Accuses Roosevelt of Provoking War

Suggests Panama Canal As Fascist Outpost on Basis of News Reports

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Feb. 2.—Italian press versions of President Roosevelt's statements before the Senate Military Affairs Committee in Washington Tuesday, quoting him as saying that the United States frontier is in France, today drew angry retorts and a Fascist press threat that if the United States extended her first line to Europe, Germany and Italy would move their defenses "up to the Panama Canal."

Virginio Gayda, regarded as Premier Mussolini's mouthpiece, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia under the heading, "Peace Sabotaged by Washington," asserted:

"In pushing the offensive confines of the United States up to the Rhine, Roosevelt clearly creates for Germany and Italy the duty of extending their defensive confines up to the Panama Canal.

"His policy which lavishes itself in creating new gratuitous complications in Europe becomes therefore responsible for the profoundest world alterations."

Il Lavoro Fascista said President Roosevelt's reported remarks represented "the Jewish international at work."

Charges that the President was trying to provoke a world war to destroy totalitarian states burst simultaneously in the late editions all afternoon newspapers.

All the attacks pivoted on reports published in Europe of the President's statements at a secret conference of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

"Provocation to War"

Gayda said, "Certainly these declarations, exploded in the midst of laborious efforts of European men of good will to save the peace, appear to be premeditated acts of open provocation to war."

Gayda and other commentators asserted the President had dealt a blow to British Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of pacification and the efforts of Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler toward peace.

L'Avenire said, "Roosevelt has assumed an enormous responsibility before history."

La Tribuna attributed the President's reported stand to "the Jewish octopus," and said that for the United States to extend her frontier to France would make the Maginot line "a line of fear and a line of provocation."

The press seized upon former President Herbert Hoover's Chicago speech as evidence of strong opposition in the United States to the "bomb hurled to sabotage efforts at European conciliation."

(Hoover appealed Wednesday night for Congress to have President Roosevelt's foreign policy "clarified before we go blindly into great increases in armament.").

"The bellicose proposals of Roosevelt are causing alarm in the United States, and there is bitter criticism of Presidential policy," Il Lavoro Fascista said, and termed the President's reported remarks a "sales talk" to sell airplanes and armaments to France.

Nazis Confirm Doubling U-Boats, Bigger Cruiser Guns

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 2.—Germany formally announced to the world tonight she was taking advantage of the 1935 and 1937 Anglo-German naval agreements to build up to parity with the British fleet in submarines and to arm her new 10,000-ton cruisers with heavier guns.

The guns will be of the 20.3 centimeters caliber (7.992 inches) instead of 15 centimeters (5.906 inches.)

Great Britain was informed of the decision last Dec. 30.

The following announcement was released tonight through DNB, German official news agency.

"In December, 1938, the German government notified the British government of its intention to put into effect certain rights under the Anglo-German naval agreements of June 18, 1935, and July 17, 1937.

"Friendly conversations took place in Berlin December 30, 1938, on certain questions arising from the German claims to these rights.

"Germany at that time undertook to make a communication in writing, which was done January 18.

"Accordingly, Germany will build up its submarine tonnage to parity with the member states of the British empire, beginning with 1939 until the agreed limit is reached.

"Germany will also arm the two 10,000-ton cruisers K and L now under construction, transferring them from Class B to Class A, to which Germany is entitled under the agreement."

Under the 1935 pact, Germany agreed to limit her total naval tonnage to 35 per cent of Britain's.

Under the 35/100 ratio she undertook to observe a 45/100 ratio in submarines, the excess in the submarine category to be balanced by a deficiency in others.

The pact, however, recognized Germany's right to parity in submarines and there was an escape clause which allowed her to build beyond the 45/100 ratio "in the event of a situation arising which in its (the German government's) opinion makes it necessary."

The intention to achieve parity means that Germany intends to more than double her present submarine tonnage of about 31,000 tons completed or under construction, since Britain's is about 70,000.

Under the 1937 agreement, Germany came under the scope of the 1936 London Naval Treaty between the United States, Britain and France.

That pact provided for exchange of information on new construction and for limitation of the tonnages and armaments of individual warships.

Franco Drive Closing Trap On 250,000

Loyalist Resistance Collapses; Vich Falls Without Fight

By the United Press.

Barcelona, Feb. 2.—Loyalist resistance tonight was reported to have collapsed along the entire Catalonian battlefront as Gen. Franco's insurgent columns surged up the Segre Valley and threatened to trap 250,000 loyalists between the sea cost and the French border.

The fall of Vich, guarding the upper end of the Ter Valley and the military key to the remaining areas of Catalonia still under loyalist control, was regarded by military experts as tantamount to the smashing of the last important loyalist resistance.

Vich fell without a struggle as the insurgent forces, after hammering their way through the Sierra Montseny Range in the wake of Franco's aerial bombers, pushed after retreating loyalists many of them reported in full flight toward the French border.

To the west, the column advancing up the Segre was reported to be within sight of Seo de Urgel, last loyalist stronghold in the west.

Halfway between Vich and Seo da Urgel, the City of Berga, in the heart of the Llonegat Valley, also was reported to have been occupied, indicating the loyalists were in retreat along the whole battle front.

Withdrawal of the loyalist forces from the Sierra Montseny region and the surrender of Vich without a battle apparently was decided upon by the loyalist command in order to concentrate the entire loyalist strength around Gerona for the last defense in Catalonia.

There was no indication, however, that the new loyalist commander, Gen. Enrique Jurado, would be able to rally his forces for any serious resistance. Fortifications had been prepared below Vich, but beyond that point there is neither an organized defense line or natural obstacles.

The insurgent advance up the Segre Valley toward Seo de Urgel was checked by heavy snows and bad weather.

Meanwhile the Navarrese column moving up near the coast joined forces with the Moroccan troops advancing toward Gerona, cutting parallel swaths throught southern Gerona Province. The eastern column drove up the Tordera River, which runs northward from the Mediterranean at a point where the coast slants eastward to the French border.

Paris, Feb. 2 (AP).—Senator Leon Berard, personal friend of Gen. Franciseo Franco, left Paris tonight on a semiofficial mission which diplomatic sources said might result in recognition of insurgent Spain by France.

Berard was to go directly to Burgos where he expected to interview the insurgent generalissimo in the next few days.

Angered Veterans Attack and Hurt Belgian Premier

PAUL SPAAK

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Feb. 2.—A group of former service men shouting for the resignation of Premier Paul Henri Spaak attacked the premier outside his home tonight and slightly injured him by a blow on the head.

The attack resulted from the veterans' disapproval of the government's appointment of Dr. Martens as a member of the Flemish Academy.

Martens once was sentenced to death because he accepted membership in the Council of Flanders, created by the Germans during their occupation of Belgium during the World War. Later he was released under amnesty.

Earlier in the day opposition members in the Chamber of Deputies in a stormy session failed by a vote of 88 to 86 to force the government to reconsider the appointment.

Rumania Reaches Political Accord With Yugoslavia

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 2 (AP).—A four-point aggreement between Rumania and Yugoslavia was announced tonight at conclusion of conferences between Rumanian Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu and Milan Stoyadinovich, Yugoslav premier.

Gafencu said the points determined upon included:

Reiteration of decisions to defend their present borders.

Determination to adopt a "conciliatory attitude" toward all countries in the Danubian basin, particularly Hungary and Bulgaria.

Approval of plans to construct a highway connecting Trieste with the Black Sea, to pass through Zagreb, Belgrade and Bucharest.

Moscow Warns Axis Through Budapest

Closes Its Legation, Says Anti-Comintern Now Rules Magyars

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 2.—Soviet Russia fired a warning round at the anti-Comintern Pact today by ordering her legation at Budapest closed and asking Hungary, the latest anti-Comintern convert, to close her Moscow legation.

An official explanation said Hungary's decision January 13 to join the Italian-German-Japanese accord against international communism "was thrust upon the Hungarian government from the outside."

The Soviet government decided that any diplomatic dealings with Hungary should be carried on indirectly.

Foreign Commissar Litvinoff informed the Hungarian minister, Dr. Michael Jungerth-Arnothy that relations henceforth could be maintained through Hungarian and Soviet representatives in some capital other than Moscow or Budapest.

While this was not a formal rupture of relations, it constituted a more serious jolt, for Moscow's reason for the move was officially described as a conviction that Hungary was under a foreign thumb and had "lost its independence to a considerable degree."

The official announcement said that as a result of the Munich agreement partitioning Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary had been subjected to "strong pressure by certain states" and yielded easily to join the anti-Comintern Pact.

Moscow's act was only a warning blow, for the Japanese, Italian and German embassies were still functioning normally.

The next move, it was said, was Budapest's, but even more important was what Tokyo, Rome and Berlin would do.

Taft Junior High Gives Diplomas To 91 Students

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, last night conferred diplomas upon 91 seniors at Taft Junior High School.

A series of tableaux were presented by the students depicting contacts with life through literature. Among the books dramatized were "Little Women," "A Girl of the Limberlost," "The Life of Louis Pasteur," "Marie Antoinette," and "The Royal Road to Romance."

Mrs. Margaret Merritt announced the list of special school awards. The names of the graduating class were printed in The Post Wednesday.

97 Get Diplomas At Gordon Junior

Diplomas were presented yesterday to 97 members of the midwinter graduating class of Gordon Junior High School in commencement exercises at the school.

Featuring the exercises was the portrayal by Richard Radcliff, Lawrence Fellows, Laura McNeese and Hollis Kushman of the commencement theme, "Schools of Tomorrow." Lorraine Newell presented the class gift to Frank Woodward, principal.

Graduates and the schools to which they were assigned were listed in The Post Wednesday.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

UP WITH THE JOLLY ROGER! If the Pirates' Den was a stage setting, it would evoke waves of applause as the curtain rolled up. Entering, you face a three story, century-old sweep of gray stone wall. Against it stands a weathered main mast, complete with ratlines and crow's nest. A brace of old cannon, a gibbet and a pillory frown menacingly. Rusty old chains are looped from the overhanging gallery. There are crashes of breaking beer bottles, a blare of music, an occasional shot. A playful place, my hearties!

The Brethren of the Coast, headed by Cap'n Don Dickerman himself, are all over the place. You are admitted by a tall villain with a patch over his eye. Blunderbuss Babe has the checking concession. There are little buccaneers, big buccaneers, bearded buccaneers and one-legged buccaneers. Some of their names—Black Andy, Tubby Dynamite, Pickle Puss, Slim the Gunner, Stinger Stan, Dead Pan Peewee. The Den, now open for "rehearsal nights," which have been heavily attended, will be open in earnest next Tuesday.

Pirates' Den Deck Rule: "Leave your business and other violence outside."

GLEE CLUB: Are you ever beset by a nostalgia for those undergraduate days? Then you'd better go to the Mayflower Lounge and let the boys of Sidney's Glee Club sound off on your favorite college songs. You'll also enjoy the smart double-piano rhythm of Dick Koons and Frank Coviello.

PRIZE PRESS RELEASE: From Joe Duprey, enterprising young publicity aide at the Shoreham, we hear that Joaquin Garcia personally made the marimbas used in his marimba orchestra. Writes Joe: "Marimbas are made from a hard wood 'that grows in Guatemalan swamps. Marimba makers go up and down these forests listening to the wind blowing through the dead trees. It may take months, but finally the marimba maker will find a tree producing a peculiar tone when the wind soughs through its skeleton branches. From that tree marimbas will be made."

Thanks and again, Joe. We haven't had so much fun since the arrival of a press screed claiming that some trombone player was the descendant of a famous composer who, history says, died without legitimate offspring.

ROVING ACCORDIONIST: Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, often spends his Sundays playing benefits or for special parties at the homes of the weekday customers of Anchor. He's played for parties at the homes of a number of Latin-American diplomats and at the Arts Club, and has also enjoyed doing benefits for hospitals and orphanages.

RAY SHINES: Singer Ray Beck has returned to the Uptown cocktail lounge after an absence of a few weeks; was greeted happily by the customers. Now there'll be more of those trios in blue by Ray, Libby Frazier and Howard Tophan.

REUNION IN BAMBOO: That chic girl in black to whom Bamboo Gardens' Emcee Al Norton addressed so many side remarks the other evening was Adele Gould, of the theatrical Goulds. Blackface Comedian Al Gould is her brother. Adele was the leading lady of the show in which Al Norton received his baptism in trouping.

ONE UP FOR MARCO: Comes a mysterious missive (in a feminine hand) saying: "I wonder who is luring the feminine element to the Cafe Caprice. It couldn't possibly be that handsome Spaniard?" Yes, madam, it probably could. But Marco Rosales isn't a Spaniard. He's a South American.

DERBY MIDDIES: Unpredictable Al Simmonds of the Brown Derby has uniformed his waitresses and check girls in uniforms resembling those of Annapolis cadets, except that they're made of bright blue satin.

REQUESTS HEADED: Since Paul Kain (Metronome Room) has been playing those national broadcasts, his fan mail has more than doubled. The compliments addressed to Paul and his orchestra are usually topped off by requests for special numbers. The maestro tries to play all requests possible.

Shar-Zad Room patrons are also great ones for requests. Leader Don Taylor of the Biltmore Boys tells us that often request numbers make up his entire evening's program. Don likes it that way because the patrons get what they want and he doesn't have to do any program planning.

LOTUS QUORUM: Legislators seen enjoying the Lotus Lindsay Revue included Senator Chandler Gurney, Representative Harry R. Sheppard and Representative Thomas D'Alesandro.

CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM: Hi Hat should add a mezzanine or second story or hanging garden to its present space—especially on week-ends and pay-days. Everyone tries to get in and no one wants to get out. The Red Jackets play like mad, the standees refuse to go until they get a table—but there are no tables.

ECHOES ACROSS TABLES: At the King Cole Room: My girl has a veil with white dots on it. She always thinks it's snowing . . . In the Rainbow Room: She said she was the wife of the Unknown Soldier . . . In the Lounge Riviera: He looks like Tyrone Power, but he acts like Wallace Beery . . . In Mayfair: Singer Louanna makes that "Everybody's Laughing" song come true by remarking, "The only serious mistake I ever made was when I married that radio announcer."

BOULA BOULA has nothing to do with Yale. It's the name of a wonderful soup combining green turtle broth and green peas, and invented by Chef Jarrin of the Raleigh.

'Gunga Din' Accorded Previews at RKO-Keith's

Crowds Acclaim Pretentious Production; Many Stars Appear in Splendid Cast; Pertinent Comments Concerning Theater

"GUNGA DIN." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht, founded on the Rudyard Kipling poem, adapted to the screen by Joel Sayre and Fred Guiol, featuring Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., with Joan Fontaine, Sam Jaffe, Edward Ciannelli, Montagu Love, Robert Coote, Abner Biberman, Lumsden Hare and hundreds of others. Produced and directed by George Stevens. Previewed Wednesday, February 1. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Twenty-four hours of contemplation of the Gargantuan proportions and manifold merits of RKO-Radio's production of "Gunga Din" only serve to corroborate hasty preview impressions set down in this space yesterday when we were fresh from the projection room.

BELL

"Gunga Din," beyond the measure of any picture RKO-Radio ever has released, deserves the overworked and largely discredited descriptive, "colossal." It is all of that. It projects scenes upon the screen that seldom have been equaled and, one is tempted to say, never surpassed, in the stupendous depiction of overwhelming action. As was remarked here yesterday, "Gunga Din" is initiated by scenes that would do for the climax of any ordinary picture. It proceeds, then, to compile a cumulative succession of exciting developments that surge to a final tumultuous sequence that is of tremendous and magnificent scope. It is here, at the very end of the film that a few lines of Kipling's poem are read for the first time. They are spoken with fine emotional power and dramatic effectiveness by Montagu Love.

But, in view of all the generalities that have gone before, something concrete might be said concerning the actual motivation of the plot devised by Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht to lend added luster to the renown of Kipling's water-boy, who died a hero in the armies of Her Majesty the Queen, in India. "Gunga Din" makes no pretense to eminence as an "historical epic." It may be that, in the abstract, but it sets forth only to disclose the patriotic careers of three sergeants of the British army serving in India, to whom duty and love of country and adventure always come first. These stalwart fighting men are Cutter, MacChesney and Ballantine. They work together with finely antagonistic friendship and to the supreme consternation of all who oppose their fists or their armed forces.

These are the hardy lads played by Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., with as fine a show of devotion and primitive bravado as the screen ever has reflected. The towering Mr. McLaglen, of course, is inured to this sort of robustious drama through long experience in similarly flamboyant roles. It is more or less of a new experience for the Messrs. Grant and Fairbanks. Both have been in uniform before, on the screen, but never in parts requiring quite the heroics called for by their current assignments. They work on an absolute parity. Their opportunities are equal. Their performances are gauged to a fine sense of unification of talents conspicuously adapted to this sort of melodramatic field day.

Romance Suffers a Quick Demise

Mr. Fairbanks it is who thinks he wishes to become married and leave the army. That is a romantic dream that encounters slight difficulties and insuperable obstacles. He "takes on" again, after all the scrimmaging in the stronghold of the rebellious natives is over and one wonders whatever became of Joan Fontaine, who strives so diligently, but briefly, to inject a romantic flavor into a vivid tale that is preponderantly on the side of "Queen and country."

The basis of the plot, needless to say, is the quelling of a rebellion inspired by a rejuvenated sect of murderers, inactive for 80 years, whose plan of slaughter is so minute as to encompass not only a definite nomination of those to be annihilated but also the digging of their graves before they are dead. It is into this ominous situation that Cutter, MacChesney and Ballantine launch themselves. They all come out alive. Most of the natives do not.

If a specific analogy must be drawn, I would suggest that "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Drums" be rolled into one and then multiplied by two, with Technicolor subtracted. Technicolor, incidentally, is not missed from "Gunga Din," as was attested by last night's two preview audiences when the film was presented for the first time in Washington at 7:30 and 9:35, at RKO-Keith's.

For particular individual encomiums there should be singled out of this huge cast a few who contribute generously to the effect finally registered in the consciousness of any audience. Foremost, after the featured triumvirate, should come Sam Jaffe, who does an uncommonly fine piece of work in the title role. And something should be set down, too, about the admirable portrayal turned in by the veteran Montagu Love, who, as the commanding colonel of the garrison, not only plays his part handsomely, but reads Kipling's lines with moving and vital effect to give the film its final fillip. And then there is the obscure player who appears in the role of Kipling. He looks and acts as Kipling probably looked and might have acted in a few "bit" moments that add still further cogency to a picture that has been finely designed and superlatively executed. Edward Ciannelli, the original "bad man" in "Winter Set," adds to the luster of his name by another singularly ominous characterization in "Gunga Din." There are many more who should be given credit for the meritorious work they do, but both time and space are fleeting.

Bevy of Beauties to Deliver "Tail Spin"

When Twentieth Century-Fox decided to make an aviation picture, dealing primarily with the engaging topic of women fliers, Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of production, went the whole way. He also must have communicated a slightly broad hint to his publicity department. The picture was "Tail Spin." The cast includes Constance Bennett, Alice Faye and Nancy Kelly, in the featured roles, with such established players as Charles Farrell, Joan Davis and Jane Wyman in support. What the publicity department has done about it deserves, and hereby gets, a new paragraph.

On Sunday at 2:55 p. m., prints of "Tail Spin," to be shown at Loew's Capitol Theater the week of Friday, February 10, will be delivered to Sam Wheeler, local manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Carter T. Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc., at the Washington Airport. They will be accompanied by two famous women fliers and several starlets from the Twentieth Century-Fox lot in Hollywood. Among the "delivery agents" will be Betty Huyler Gillies, socially prominent woman-sportsman pilot; Teddy Kenyon, noted woman stunt flier, and Gloria and Barnata Brewster, twins; Iva Stewart and Alice Armand, all young starlets, plus several studio executives.

Washington is only one of two dozen cities at which this pulchritudinous band of "freight clerks" will deposit prints of "Tail Spin." The party is covering about 20,000 miles of airline travel in a Nation-wide tour of American cities. A similar group, headed by Ruth Nichols, is taking a Northern route. After the prints all have been delivered, the two detachments will unite in New York and be present at a gala Broadway premiere of the picture.

It is a significant augury of the film's worth that it was written by Frank Wead, former aviator and one of the screen's most prolific and most competent scenarists.

an early-week visitor to the Capital for the President's birthday celebrations, who comes to the screen at the Earle today in the stellar role of the Warner Brothers production of "Wings of the Navy," in which Olivia de Havilland, a star who failed to make the celebrations, appears in the leading feminine role

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 2.

GAG: Some weeks ago Time magazine—in retaliation for the New Yorker magazine's Profile of Henry Luce—included, and still includes, the name of "Eustace Tilley" in the listing of its contributing editors. "Eustace Tilley" is the fictitious character originated in the New Yorker to typify its circulation . . . The editors of Time have been annoyed because the New Yorker's editors made no indication that they had recognized the listing of their pet name . . . But Time's editors really will be annoyed next week when Corey Ford—who originated the name of "Eustace Tilley" and owns the copyright—brings suit for infringement against Time.

LAMENT: Ted Husing emerged from Doctors Hospital yesterday after a nose operation, required because of the strain caused by his constant talking . . . The dour Truman Talley, head of Fox Movietone, wired Husing: "Understand the operation is not a success—because you still can talk."

FAME: Prince and Princess Radziwill came to Tony's and participated in a prize-package auction being conducted there . . . The princess was congratulated by the other guests for having purchased a package containing a photo of Anna Held . . . "It is a very nice frame," the princess acknowledged, "but as for the picture—tell me, please—who is Anna Held?"

LEGEND: James Roosevelt guided a group of friends through the White House and showed them the Lincoln Room . . . "I slept here once," he told them, "and can assure you that there are no ghosts" . . . "Then how do you account for the legend, which has been revived recently?" Jimmy was asked . . . "I can't explain that," he confessed, "but I slept here on Inauguration night. I got up from my bed to open the window—and never realized that the inaugural celebrants were still jammed on the lawn outside . . . and I wasn't wearing any pajama tops."

RETORT: At the 18 Club last night a bald-headed customer began to heckle Frankie Hyers . . . Hyers studied the heckler's shiny pate and said: "I thought I shot you into the side pocket yesterday."

TRUTH: When the Twin Convention was held in Chicago last August, Priscilla and Crystal White, then fulfilling a dance engagement at the Morrison Hotel, were selected to participate . . . A number of radio programs featured these dancing twins as guest stars and the convention delegates singled out these girls among the prettiest of the competing twins . . . Look magazine published a photo of this twin dance team . . . Priscilla and Crystal White now are appearing at Leon & Eddie's. And the fact is that they're not twins . . . They're mother and daughter.

EDUCATION: Princess Chavchavadze's son now is a student at Andover . . . He was assigned to write a thesis on the subject, "Audience Reaction at Concerts" . . . The boy, remembering his most recent experience as a listener of song renditions, wrote a careful essay and submitted it to the English instructor . . . It concerned such music masterpieces as "I'm the Fleur-de-Levy" and "I Brought Culture to Buffalo" . . . "My good man," the instructor correctly guessed, "you have been listening to the songs of Spivy in the back room of Tony's, on West Fifty-second street."

ENTERPRISE: Tommy Manville, Sam Rosoff, the subway builder, and Harry Richman went to Jack White's cafe this morning . . . They were introduced and asked to entertain . . . The trio got into a huddle to decide upon something which all could do equally well . . . "Okay, we have it," they announced—and started a dice game.

CURIOSITY: The head of the Dole Pineapple Juice Co. is a Honolulu resident named Ritchie. His company sponsors a radio program featuring Phil Baker, Eddie De Lange's orchestra and the Andrews Sisters . . . Mr. Ritchie expressed a desire to see his entertainers, but cannot find the time required for the trip to New York. "Then arrange for the entire troup to come here and do one broadcast," he directed . . . "That can be arranged," his New York office advised, "but static conditions re-broadcast can't be cleared until September" . . . "Okay," was Mr. Ritchie's final order. "Sign entire troupe through September and bring them all here."

TROUBLE: A British bar standee at a West Fifty-second street club noticed that another Britisher sat alone at a table . . . He walked across the room, introduced himself as a countryman and began to relate a tale of long woes . . . "And with all these troubles," he sighed, "I'm lucky to be here" . . . The club's manager, who was standing nearby, commiserated with the lamenting Britisher . . . "But if you think you've had trouble and are lucky to be here," he announced, "let me introduce you to this man you've been talking to. His name's Richardson—a member of the crew of the Cavalier."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 2.—One of the most interesting men in Hollywood today is the erstwhile hobo-director, who when millionaire producers failed, talked George Bernard Shaw into letting him produce his plays. And after they shook hands over the arrangements Shaw lent him money, saying "My associate can't walk around the streets of London without money in his pockets." That man is Gabriel Pascal, producer of "Pygmalion," who did as neat a bit of starving in our town as Clark Gable in bygone days.

HEDDA HOPPER

He told me that the thing that made him hang on here years ago was going to all the previews to watch Irvin Thalberg's pale, sensitive face, for here was a man Gabriel could respect. "If Thalberg could give his life when he had millions, to keep his ideals, I felt I could skip a couple of meals for mine," he added.

He also said, "I don't believe I could live in Hollywood always! Here you go away from nature, instead of coming to it. It lacks the courage to become human."

He's more sensitive to vibrations emanating from a person, than to faces. Evidently Shaw is, too, because when he convinced the great writer that he was speaking truth, Shaw said, "I believe you're going to bring me greater happiness than I've ever known." And from an 84-year-old youngster. Yes, achievement still reigns supreme.

Very little is known about Wendy Hiller who's made a sensation in "Pygmalion." Pascal saw Wendy as Joan d'Arc at Malvern. When he went to her dressing room and told her he'd make her the greatest actress in pictures, a young man sat silent in the corner. He was never introduced; he never spoke. The following week Wendy married him. When Shaw heard of it, he asked, "But why did you let your star marry?"

But that didn't prevent her giving a great performance. He promised Shaw he'd never have a minor actor in one of his pictures. But the greatest he could find for every part!

So, for his next, "The Doctor's Dilemma," which he'll do in England, he's chosen glamorous red-haired, green-eyed Greer Garson, the English girl of whom Noel Coward said, "She's one of our most promising actresses today." We didn't seem to know that, for we let her sit for a year and a half under contract, without giving her a thing to do. You'll see her first in "Good-bye Mr. Chips." The leading part will be filled by one of our biggest stars and the supporting cast consists of Roland Young, C. Aubrey Smith, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Paul Lukas, Jean Cadell and David Tree—Sir Herbert's grandson. The picture starts in June, but those details have been taken care of already. A new method of doing things.

When he's doing a picture, nothing else exists, not even beautiful women. He'll prove "The Doctor's Dilemma" is much more than a triangle play. Nobody has to show a genius to the public, the public's only too ready to sense what's inside a great artist. Their angelic qualities crash through; the outside doesn't seem to matter. As Emerson said, "What you are, speaks so loud, I can't hear what you say."

He'll follow that with "The Devil's Disciple" which has an American background, and, of course, will be done here. God is what the masses want, pictures must have a daily vibration to the world's consciousness.

And he's also planning to put the life of Amelia Earhart on the screen. He says, "I love her spirit and want to glorify it. And will try to do justice to the exterior life of an American angel.

Mead Suggests Railway Pact With Rivals

Roads' Future Lies In Compromise, Says N. Y. Senator

The entire national economy is bound up with the existence of a speedy, efficient and economical transportation system, Senator James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York, told 453 members of the Traffic Club of Washington last night at the annual banquet of the club in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

The future of the railroad lies in compromise with air, road and water carriers, said Senator Mead, pointing out that while the railroads' supremacy has been challenged, their permanent existence is not open to question. He admitted that Government regulation had not so far made the railroads a financial success, but declared that Congress is deeply concerned in the railroad problem. In fixing rates for both freight and passenger traffic, he said, the railroads should be regarded as a mass production enterprise. It is better to carry 40 passengers at 2 cents a mile than only 15 or 20 at 3 cents a mile.

Guests who were introduced by Floyd F. Crabbe, president-elect of the Traffic Club, were Representative Clarence F. Lea, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce; Ambrose O'Connell, Second Assistant Postmaster General; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission; Edward J. Noble, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Charles G. Morgan, jr., manager, Division of Operations, American Trucking Association; Ed. F. Lacey, executive secretary, National Industrial Traffic League, and William P. Bartel, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission was accused by a railway labor leader yesterday of having "manhandled" railroad rate structures.

George Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, criticized the ICC for reducing rail rates in prosperous periods and raising them as business shrank.

He made the statements while expressing opposition before the House Interstate Commerce Committee to a transportation bill by Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California, calling for expansion and reorganization of the ICC.

Harrison said President Roosevelt's six-man executive-labor committee had recommended creation of a new transportation board which would relieve the ICC of almost all duties except in connection with rate questions.

He remarked, too, that the ICC had authorized some railroads to float security issues when they were unable to carry existing fixed charges.

U. S. Urges Court Uphold Ban on Picketing Envoys

The Department of Justice, in a brief filed with the Supreme Court, yesterday defended the constitutionality of a Congressional resolution regulating the display of banners in the District criticizing foreign governments.

The legislation makes it unlawful to display within 500 feet of an embassy or legation any "device designed or adapted to intimidate, coerce or bring into public odium any foreign government" except by special permission.

In upholding the law, Solicitor General Jackson urged the tribunal to refuse to review the convictions of four men on charges of picketing the German and Austrian embassies on March 14, 1938.

WPA Director Linked With Vote Coercion

Testimony Discloses He Rehired 5 Ousted for N. M. Political Activity

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Feb. 2.—Testimony that Fred A. Healy, ousted New Mexico Works Progress administrator, ordered the rehiring of WPA workers who had been dismissed for asserted political activities, was given today in the trial of 35 persons accused of fraud in relief.

E. A. Rose, former Albuquerque WPA zone supervisor, testified that eight Albuquerque workers, were discharged last April on the recommendation of Federal agents investigating reports of political pressure on relief clients.

Five Reinstated

Five of the ousted workers, all of them defendants in the trial, subsequently were reinstated, he said.

"And who rehired them?" demanded U. S. District Attorney Grantham.

"Mr. Healy handled that himself," Rose replied.

The witness said the five, Salamon Tafoya, a nephew of United States Senator Chavez; Lot Gonzales, B. W. Means, Neil McNerney and Joe de Armond, were returned to the rolls within "about 30 days" after they had been removed.

Rose identified a telegram, addressed to him from Washington, D. C., and bearing Healy's signature, which advised him to "reinstate McNerney and reassign De Armond" to some position other than that of assistant clerk, which he had held previously. McNerney was a sidewalk project safety inspector.

McNerney Rehired

The witness said a replying telegram, sent with his approval, advised Healy that McNerney was being rehired.

Healy is among the defendants.

The Government put on the stand another group of WPA workers, who corroborated testimony previously given by fellow workers to alleged sale of "dance tickets" and assessment of wages for political campaign funds.

'Jesse James' in Second Week

Largely removing the stigma that has attached to the names of the James boys for more than half a century, "Jesse James," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the notorious careers of the Nation's most famous bandits, yesterday entered its second week at Loew's Palace Theater, with Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda and Nancy Kelly in the leading roles.

"Jesse James," by a kindly contemplation of the acute problems that confronted Jesse and Frank James, when predatory railroad interests sought to seize their mother's properties, translates outlawry into semblance of a "defense mechanism" set up by the family of simple agriculturists against unconscionable persecution. It casts a new light upon the possible motives that may have actuated Jesse James and his brother in taking the law into their own hands over a period of almost two decades.

There is a great deal of what commonly goes under the name of "human interest" in the script for the film play that has been so cleverly devised by Nunnally Johnson. Also in it is a full meed of excitement, suspense, romantic interest and pathos. Trickery, "double-crossing" and sheer villainy also have their places in the development of the story of a career in crime that somehow manages to exert a tremendously sympathetic interest in behalf of the marauding, but courageous brothers who, as often as not, seem, in the film, to have the right on their side. The personal conflicts, the train robberies, the constant pursuit of the "cops-and-robbers" game and the gentler moments between Jesse James and his young and constant wife all add to the sum total of effective drama that is to be found in the picture.

We already have gone on record with regard to the cast appearing in this fine exposition of the aid Technicolor can be to the achievement of realistic and eye-filling sequences that abound in action as well as perfectly registered color. There are many periods during the play's progress when natural color photography, beautiful as it is, is completely forgotten in the intensity of interest in the characters and the drama in which they are involved.

But to get back to the cast, Tyrone Power once more is a youthful hero, in the title role, but one to whom, it seems to me, credit should be given for a finely balanced and restrained performance. Henry Fonda, as his brother Frank, is equally effective in a role of lesser opportunities. Nancy Kelly, as the young woman who marries Jesse James and is about to realize happiness when tragedy blasts her dream, steps another rung up the ladder toward stardom. The long list of others comprising the roster of principals render admirable support, foremost among them being Brian Donlevy, Randolph Scott, Jane Darwell, Henry Hull, John Carradine, Donald Meek, Slim Somerville and J. Edward Bromberg.

The excellent short subjects, supplementing the major feature, also are being retained at the Palace for the second week. N. B. B.

Luce Terms Security Reserve Fund 'a Fraud'

Representative Luce (Republican), Massachusetts, said last night the reserve fund feature of the Social Security act was "the most remarkable fiscal fraud this country has ever seen."

Instead of handling the fund built up by the Social Security system as an insurance company would its reserve fund, the Congressman said in a broadcast, "the men who shaped the law" intended from the first "to use the money for the running expenses of the Government or for the reduction of the public debt."

Competitive System in Peril, Arnold Tells Club

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Thurman W. Arnold, assistant United Staes attorney general, said tonight the Nation was faced with a choice "of either enforcing the anti-trust laws or drifting in the direction of the self-regimentation of business."

In an address prepared for delivery to the Economic Club of New York, the head of the Justice Department's anti-trust division said, "if we want a competitive system we must take measures to maintain it."

Speaking along the same lines, Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, said, "all contact of Government with business should be patterned with two general objectives in view:

"On the one hand, to protect the individual against the greed and cunning of others, and on the other hand, to prevent interfering with the fullest development of human ingenuity and power.

"Between these two gateways lies the only real field for constructive Government control, or, as I prefer to say, regulation of business.

Morgan Certain Symphony Will Raise $111,000

Success of the annual $111,000 sustaining fund campaign for the National Symphony Orchestra was predicted yesterday by Thomas P. Morgan, jr., chairman of the orchestra association's campaign committee, at a meeting of the organization's leaders.

Morgan told committee chairmen who will be in charge of more than 600 volunteers when the drive gets under way February 12 for 10 days the amount sought is the "absolute minimum" on which the orchestra can maintain its present standards. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, member of the symphony board of directors.

A Fruit Of The Purge

Appointments made by the President "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate" are often a source of friction. In practice this procedure often means that a nominee, even though he may be otherwise qualified, will not be confirmed if he is personally objectionable to a Senator of the State in which the appointment is made. President Wilson referred to this form of senatorial courtesy as "irresponsible dictation." And Taft declared that its effect is to turn the Constitution upside down.

A year ago Senator Borah tried to put the Senate on record as being opposed to senatorial courtesy. Other legislators have frequently deplored the results of the practice. Under different circumstances progress might have been made toward modifying or abolishing the so-called courtesy rule. Instead, the 15-to-3 vote of the Senate Judiciary Committee to reject the nomination of Floyd H. Roberts as a Federal judge in Virginia suggests that the practice has become more firmly established.

When Senator Holt complained last year that the nomination of a collector of internal revenue for West Virginia was obnoxious to him the Senate disregarded its old custom. The appointee was confirmed by a 3-to-1 vote. It was then that Senator Borah asked the Senate to resolve that nominees should be confirmed if they are fit, regardless of the "personal feelings, likes, or dislikes of a Senator." Now even Senator Borah is supporting the objections of Senators Glass and Byrd to the Roberts nomination.

This more vigorous adherence to senatorial courtesy is probably a reaction from President Roosevelt's attempted purge during last year's primary elections. The President asked the voters to reject various candidates because they were personally objectionable to him. In doing so he aroused the wrath of many legislators who, as events later proved, had the confidence of a majority of their constituents. Now they are eager to reject Presidential nominations which are objectionable to them.

Moreover, the Virginia Senators regard the Roberts appointment as a deliberate personal affront. There seems some reason to believe that the President's primary motive was not to select the most competent jurist available, but to humiliate legislators who had opposed some of his policies. Such abuse of the appointive power is even more to be condemned than the practice of senatorial courtesy.

No doubt our appointive system, under which responsibility is shared by the President and the Senate, could be much improved. Under present conditions, however, the Senate believes itself justified in using its powers to thwart appointments made to punish legislators for sincere adherence to their convictions.

The Church Replies

In his address to the Reichstag last Monday, Hitler declared that, "no one in Germany has hitherto been persecuted for his religious views, nor will any one be persecuted on that account."

With Martin Niemoeller in jail, with many other priests and ministers in concentration camps, with religious education severely circumscribed or forced into the Procrustean bed of Nazi ideology, the mendacity of this statement is exceeded only by its audacity. But, then, Hitler's belief, as expressed in "Mein Kempf," is that if a lie is great enough and is repeated often enough it will be believed.

Speaking for the Vatican, L'Osservatore Romano has quickly taken issue with the Fuehrer's claims that religious freedom exists in Germany. This newspaper admits that churches have not been closed. But only in this particular can it truthfully be said that there has been no religious persecution in the Third Reich. In many more subtle ways the Catholic Church in Germany, and this holds true in large measure for orthodox Protestantism as well, is under attack from the Nazis.

The Hitler regime, says L'Osservatore Romano, has abolished confessional schools, dissolved Catholic Action, and by the melodramatic trials of Catholic priests and members of Catholic religious orders on rarely proved charges of immorality, has sought to weaken if not destroy the church. And it has done all these things despite the solemn pledges made by the Nazi regime when it made the concordat with the Vatican in 1933.

What religious liberty means, L'Osservatore Romano goes on to say, is seen in the state of affairs that obtains in the United States, where the church enjoys and does not hesitate to exercise political pressures of the kind which Franco's buddies would not for a moment tolerate.

"On The Broad Basis"

In his speech on Wednesday night, attacking what he calls President Roosevelt's "new departure in foreign policies," former President Hoover based his entire argument on a fallacy. That fallacy is the popular but demonstrably erroneous idea that the balance of power is something with which the United States need not be concerned.

At the present early stage of a debate which is likely to grow in vehemence, and emotionalism, it is well for Americans to ask themselves precisely what is meant by this oft-used phrase. It becomes essential to do so when a man of Mr. Hoover's eminence asserts that President Roosevelt is proceeding on the "theory of joining in the balance of power throughout the world." The charge is utterly pointless, for the good reason that entirely independent of President Roosevelt the United States is already and inevitably engaged in "world-wide power politics." It is so engaged for the simple reason that this is a country with world-wide power.

The phrase "balance of power" applied to international relations means simply that in an anarchic world a certain provisional stability is attained by the willingness of the great powers to accept existing frontiers. That acceptance provides a balance, achieved by mutual agreement, permitting continuation of a state of peace. But whenever any great power moves to upset the existing situation this balance is affected and a disequilibrium threatening to peace is substituted for it. Such disequilibrium obviously exists today.

Because Great Britain has long been a satisfied nation, anxious to preserve and not disturb world peace, British policy has for decades sought to maintain the balance of power. Whenever one great nation has sought to upset the status quo in its own interest the British have thrown their weight against the aggressor. For that reason there has evolved a mistaken belief that balance of power politics is peculiarly a British device, designed for a European setting.

That is almost like saying that because the industrial revolution originated in England mechanical progress is an interest of the British and of nobody else. Actually the United States has been involved in balance of power politics at least since the turn of the century.

It was to prevent Japan from becoming too powerful in the Far East that Theodore Roosevelt intervened in the Russo-Japanese war. It was to keep the Central Powers from world domination that Woodrow Wilson asked for a declaration of war on Germany in 1917. It was to check Japan again that President Hoover in 1932 refused to recognize the conquest of Manchuria. And it is the current simultaneous dislocation of the balance of power by Japan in Asia, and by Germany and Italy in Europe and Africa, which is forcing the United States to an activist policy now.

Mr. Hoover is eminently correct in saying that "we have need to appraise coolly" the dangers abroad in the world today. He is completely wrong in suggesting, as he does suggest, that there is any reversal of traditional policies, any entanglement in "other people's wars" about the very cautious way in which the Administration is facing up to the responsibilities forced upon it.

The tragedy in Mr. Hoover's current remarks is that he knows better. During his Administration he himself sponsored steps which were the logical preliminary, and indeed the actuating force, for every move which President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull are making today. If there is any "new departure" in our foreign policy it was not initiated by Mr. Roosevelt "fourteen months ago," as Mr. Hoover charges. It was initiated on January 7, 1932, with the full approval and active indorsement of Herbert Hoover as President of the United States.

On that date, after prior secret consultation with the British and French Ambassadors, Secretary Stimson dispatched to Japan and China identical notes informing those countries—particularly Japan—that the United States "does not intend to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to" the Kellogg-Briand Pact. Here, underwritten by President Hoover, was the beginning of this active opposition to aggressors which Mr. Hoover, speaking as a politician, now attacks as "a new departure."

The whole story as set down by Henry L. Stimson, in his book on "The Far Eastern Crisis," makes Mr. Hoover's speech on Wednesday night exceedingly unpleasant reading. For Mr. Stimson tells (p. 95 and following) how he explained to President Hoover "the novelty and risks" of the nonrecognition policy, itself a form of sanctions. He tells how Hoover "hesitated not a moment. 'I agree with you,' he said. 'Let us put it on the broad basis.'" And in the discussion which followed, Mr. Stimson says, Hoover "showed that he had at once grasped the possibilities of international reorganization which were involved in the proposal."

What Mr. Hoover grasped then, he now forgets. Beyond that, Mr. Hoover denounces President Roosevelt for taking his stand on that same "broad basis" which President Hoover saw to be constructive. For this unhappy reversal political motives seem the only explanation. The attitude of Mr. Landon, who realizes and emphasizes that foreign policy is no field for playing politics, will seem to most Americans far more admirable.

Fumbling Government

As the community awaits the Griffenhagen report on reorganization of the District government, the present ponderous legislative machinery has once more been set into motion. A number of bills were recently sent to the Federal Budget Bureau by the Board of Commissioners. Other measures have been introduced in both the Senate and House. Whether or not they will be enacted, rejected or simply forgotten will depend upon many agencies entirely beyond control of Washington officials.

Most of the bills introduced by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee deal with routine municipal business that any city council would dispatch in an afternoon. One bill would change the date on which taxicabs must display new licenses. Another would permit the hiring of research assistants to do special work now assigned to teachers in the public schools. Obviously it is a gross abuse of our governmental system to force such minor local issues through a costly and cumbersome national legislature.

Heads of the local government often initiate legislation affecting the District, but that practice is discouraged by the interference of the Budget Bureau. Legislative measures, as well as the local budget, must be submitted to that Federal agency. Thus a typical District bill runs the gamut of seven agencies before it becomes law. In addition to the Board of Commissioners and the Budget Bureau, there are two congressional committees, the House and Senate and the White House. Under these circumstances it is surprising that the local government is not more seriously crippled than is the case.

The most important District bill that could be laid before Congress this year is a reorganization measure that would end this fumbling method of governing the Nation's Capital. If the Griffenhagen report gives impetus to the movement for thorough modernization of the local government it will render Washington a service of inestimable value.

Paralyzing Strikes

Modern communities are so dependent upon uninterrupted long-distance transportation service that strikes or lockouts on our railways have come to be regarded as indefensible weapons to employ in labor disputes. New York City is currently being reminded of its dependence upon another kind of transportation service—that afforded by the elevators installed in towering office structures.

A strike of elevator operators and other building service employes—the most extensive in three years—has brought a serious disruption of business in the midtown section of Manhattan. Thousands of the needle trade and fur workers employed in buildings affected by the strike order have remained away from their jobs. Business heads complain that orders are being lost and deliveries delayed by the tie-up. The distribution of the mails is also impeded.

In short, elevator and indeed heating service in a city of sky-scrapers has plainly taken on the characteristics of a public utility whose steady functioning is essential to the welfare of the community. To deprive thousands of workers and office employes of an opportunity to engage in their regular activities is an anti-social act. It should not be condoned because it happens to be an incidental result of a dispute between organized elevator operators and maintenance employes on one side and a group of associated building owners on the other. On the contrary, the fact that both employers and employes are organized makes the more inexcusable their failure to reach a settlement of a wage-hour dispute by peaceful negotiation.

Latest reports indicate that a speedy compromise of differences will be effected under pressure from city officials. But unless the public takes a strong stand against bargaining tactics that make the community a victim of labor disputes, New York might as well be prepared for an early recurrence of the elevator strike menace.

A Lima matador broke down and cried at a recent bullfight when a spectator hit him in the face with an ice cream cone. He ought to join Ferdinand under the cork tree and quietly smell the flowers.

"Chinese military tacticians are considering organizing a counter-offensive against Japan two years hence," it is reported. What's the big hurry?

A Cleveland woman told a jury she shot and killed her husband to keep him from going out nights. That'll do it, all right.

The Manton Resignation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the case of Judge Manton, President Roosevelt acted more speedily than in the days when the cases of Tin-Box Farley and Jimmie Walker came over his desk for action. He acted wisely and rightly. It may indicate he has no third-term aspirations, though with an investigation of Mr. Murphy, who apparently is not going to sit down, there can be no charge of religious bigotry.

Mr. Manton must be a good lawyer, for a good lawyer knows when to resign. ELLIS E. EGAN,

Tonic for Business

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few weeks from now, the housewives of the Nation will begin annual spring house-cleaning. It will be an event of inconvenience to established living habits. But as a ritual of rebirth, business itself may well afford to examine its own household and profit from the parallel.

The economic life of the Nation has been under tremendous strain and pressure for the past ten years. Institutions and individuals alike have been subjected to a retching, panicky existence. Politicians and reformers, good and bad, have attempted to solve the problem without much success.

But of late, several businesses of national importance have begun to lay foundations of a new order. These leaders have discovered that the chief reason for practically all our distress has been the fact that we lost sight of the basic principles of our original heritage of being a free people, while trying to maintain the highest living standard in history.

In the general welfare, business plays the paramount role. It has contributed more to our standard of living than any other force. But it has neglected to appeal to the people for continued public support in the right manner. Instead of going forward to the people—to the consumers themselves—to plead its case of public franchise, it has crawled into its house, pulled the shades down, and put a sign on the door reading, "Will Return With Prosperity."

The business executives, whose companies now begin to make their pleas to the customer, have been making slow but sure progress. For one thing, they have transformed their annual statements from those in terms of complicated accountancy to the forms for public interest. Another, they have held "open house" at their plants and factories and offices, so that the public, as well as those who were employed there could find out what the other fellow does and how he does it. There are countless other gestures in the making.

The important thing is that business is beginning to discover through its public relations work that its very existence depends upon the opinion of the consumer. For he is the one who holds in his power the ability to make or break a business. Smart management always courts his favor.

Public relations, therefore, holds the key to business futures. It ever seeks to determine what the tastes of the consumer are and how to please those tastes. In everything it does, in complete oneness with management, it emphasizes customer interest first, automatically serving as a light to a better living standard.

Just how well business will seek to apply itself to the new order, is, in itself, a matter of public interest. For business must realize that only by means of its public relations will it be able to put its own house in order. It must increase its activity, in acquainting the public with its practices, and ever accept new ideas and viewpoints for projection into the public mind. What the public needs, on its way to a better standard of living, is a greater comprehension of success in business management. HUGE W. SUTTON.

Defense or Dies?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are we men or are we mice? Are we going to let the capitalist and the foreign element drag us into another war? Then let's do something about it. Let's stop these propagandists in their tracks.

Why go over there and get our heads blown off for the benefit of a few free grabbing politicians? Why not appropriate the money necessary to go to war and turn it over to the Dies committee for investigation of the different factions. Or we might take care of some of our poor and needy citizens. As Senator Reynolds says, "Let's wash behind our own ears before we give the other fellow a bath."

Martin And The U. A. W.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a regular reader of your paper I want to enter an emphatic protest against the editorial on the United Automobile Workers which appeared in your issue of January 26.

This editorial certainly leaves the impression upon any uninformed reader that the automobile workers' union has been split by the opponents of Homer Martin. The whole tone of the editorial is such as to leave an implied blame for splitting the union upon those who suspended Homer Martin from the presidency, when actually it was Mr. Martin who did the splitting when he, in an unprecedented and dictatorial manner, suspended the majority of the executive board elected by the union. Such action, with the objective of maintaining personal control over a union, is probably without precedent in the whole history of trade unionism.

To further prejudice the public mind against the majority of the United Automobile Workers executive board (and, presumably, also against the CIO) your editorial infers that the suspension of Homer Martin will make it possible for "communist elements" to dominate the automobile workers' union. Of course, your editorial does not say that in so many words, and you can always disclaim responsibility for implications it may leave upon a reader's mind, but any writer knows well enough what the effect will be of such a statement as appears at the opening of the third paragraph of your editorial. It certainly completely covers up the fact that Homer Martin has himself been allied with a self-styled "communist" group, headed by a certain gentleman, Jay Lovestone, who has proclaimed himself and his followers as the only true disciples of communism in this country.

May I recommend to your editorial writers the reading of the Workers Age, the official organ of Jay Lovestone and his group, in which no effort is made to disguise their support of Homer Martin. As I believe your own news stories will show, one of the reasons Homer Martin split the union is precisely because a number of aides who belong to this self-proclaimed "communist" group had been dismissed by action of the executive board.

One cannot help but feel that your editorial aims to smear the CIO with a communist label, even though it is done in somewhat more delicate fashion than the Dies committee attempted to do during its proceedings. CAROL ADAMS.
Chevy Chase, Md., Jan. 30.

Critical of the South

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: E. S. C., writing from the borderland city of Richmond, is not unlike the person who refuses to see the forest for the trees—E. S. C. is unable to discern important economic factors because of an ante-bellum interest in the "biological base."

This is quite disturbing, especially when this apologist for Southern poverty implies than 20,000,000 persons of Anglo-Saxon descent are so lazy that poverty is inevitable. We can use this on our Yankee cousins when they fail to comprehend why Uncle John lets his rundown farm grow up in weeds because he just can't take time off from his checker playing, fox hunting, square dancing, jug tipping and crossroad gossip. However, in justice to the boys and girls who draw charts and cast horoscopes we should mention a few phenomena neglected by E. S. C.

In the beginning a small portion of the Southern population, known as planter "aristocracy," developed a pattern of living that shaped the ideals of the working folk—the Negro slave, the poor white and the mountaineer. Today the South still lives in the shadow of the old plantation; true, wage-slavery replaced chattel slavery, but certain hangovers remain from the past—certain mill superintendents and foremen, overseers and chain-gang boses retain all the vices of their ancestors. A nostalgia for the past permeates the thinking of both the industrial aristocracy and the white-collar laborer and intellectual.

In the writings of Erskine Caldwell and William Faulkner we find the same morbidity and sadism that marked the white employes of the old plantation system, who were isolated from society because they were neither slaves nor gentry. Gradually, as the machine age intruded upon an agrarian economy restricted to the South, the average white Southerner, unable to cope with or adapt himself to this industrialization because the indolent example set by a planter aristocracy had caused all forms of labor to be looked upon with equal distaste by both sexes of the white upper and middle classes, either migrated to other regions, where he could turn his wits and charms into money, or remained at home—frequently a drunken and violent citizen who refused to work with or understand the society he was part of and responsible for.

Poverty is the natural result of indifference and ignorance, but other factors contribute to the decline of a pepole and region. From the Civil War to the twentieth century from 80 to 90 per cent of the farmers in the South knew debt and poverty because of the crop-lien system. Unions were formed in the early nineties among the tobacco workers, but were later destroyed by the tobacco trust. Company towns replaced the small homesteads of pioneer descendants. The mill strikes of the late thirties were put down ruthlessly by the militia and public opinion formed by a press hostile to labor.

Demagogues helped to perpetuate Southern inertia and poverty, while the hoodlum excesses of the Klan made the South a region apart. In addition to the above curses, poor health added a greater burden—malaria, hookworm, tuberculosis and venereal diseases were (and are) common plagues to citizens with low economic status.

Little has been done to change the picture and only a few years ago a fundamentalist member of the Georgia Legislature asserted that the only books worth reading are the Bible, the hymnal and the almanac. This enlightened Southerner said: "There isn't another book that is necessary for anyone to read, and therefore I am opposed to all libraries." With but few exceptions, this attitude explains why the South is rich in human and natural resources, but still Problem No. 1 for the Nation to solve—our Southern political leaders are incompetent. SOUTHERNER.

Gordon

I SHALL NEVER FORGET the day he came to live with us, a small friendly ball of fur with enormous clumsy feet and the wide, intelligent face of the true collie. In joint tribute to his Scotch ancestry and the friend who gave him to us we named him Gordon. The burden of a princely pedigree rested lightly upon him, for he was one to accept the privileges of his position and ignore its responsibilities.

We were progressing nicely with his training when a grave illness in the family deprived him of any but the most necessary attentions. When our household became normal again he had gone too long upon his own sweet way. And thus he continued. Of course one expects mischief of a puppy, but when puppyhood extends over adolescence and into adult life, that is a different matter. Gordon was like some men who never grow up—a canine Peter Pan.

All his misdemeanors stemmed from an overflow of enthusiasm, and a scolding was a blight and a scourge. Our home he looked upon as a refuge not only for himself, but for any mangy mongrel he chanced to meet, and he was continually bringing in some friend to be fed and sheltered. His acquisitive instinct would have been called kleptomania in a human. Any and everything that struck his fancy he considered his by right. When the bakery started a bread route, distributing loaves in the various doorways, Gordon followed behind the delivery truck and made off with the packages. At the zenith of that particular activity, our front porch sometimes had as many as six loaves in a row, and it took half the morning to find which homes had been bereft of their staff of life.

It was with the greatest interest that he watched the erection of the house next door to us. One noon there was lamentation in the camp of the builders; their lunches had disappeared. They found the bags and boxes on our front porch, where Gordon had left them. That day we bought five extra meals. Always one for comfort, he was once seen struggling up the street pulling behind him the mattress from a neighbor's swing.

And yet he was a community pet. No one could withstand such infectious friendliness. In those days, the section of Chevy Chase between the Circle and the Bureau of Standards was a wilderness dotted with occasional houses. As the neighborhood began to build up, Gordon appointed himself a special committee to welcome the newcomers, and more than one pleasant and enduring friendship came to us through his good offices. We found that he had a regular calling route, and his widening girth under the red-brown coat indicated that he was well received.

During one bitter winter, however, Gordon began to lose weight rapidly. He would drag himself into the house, his fur crested with snow, and fall utterly exhausted into a sleep that would last for hours. And then one day we arrived at the diagnosis of his ailment. Two streets over there was a hill dedicated to sledding, and at its foot Gordon was wont to take his place. We watched from the top of the incline while he submitted to much harnessing, and then he pulled the various sleds up the grade sliding back occasionally under the weight of a youthful hitchhiker. At the top he was always rewarded, for he climbed on with the children and slid in state to the bottom.

He loved going to fires. When the big red engines screamed past he noted the direction in which they were going and then took a short cut. By the time the rest of us reached the blaze he was always there, running back and forth with the firemen as they extinguished the flames, while we looked on from the sidelines.

For all of Gordon's unquenchable spirits, however, he had a vindictive streak. At that time we had a cat which we called "Sister." She was an excellent cat, with no objectionable habits except a maddening attitude of superiority. As nearly as possible she ignored the existence of a dog in the house. Her kittens were fascinating little creatures to Gordon and he yearned for their friendship; but their mother would have none of it, meeting every overture with much spitting and tail waving.

One day Gordon disappeared for some hours, returning with the most miserable, flea-bitten kitten in the world. He brought it in by the scruff of its neck and lay belly-wise, admiring it extravagantly as it shivered in the protective circle of his forepaws. And every time Sister approached, Gordon growled ferociously. In time the revolting little beast took on a certain rangy respectability, and followed its protector devotedly upon his silly expeditions.

While we were in the country one summer, Gordon, either through mischance or intention, was the recipient of a potshot in the head. Why it was not fatal we never knew, but in an amazingly short time he was on his feet again, albeit in the happy role of chronic invalid. For some weeks he hoodwinked us, until one dewy morning we surprised him chasing rabbits in the meadow. As soon as he saw us he dropped in his tracks, moaning piteously. After waiting a full hour for someone to come and carry him in, he gave up and finally made his way to the house under his own steam.

There was nothing splendid, nor heroic, nor even particularly admirable about Gordon. At the ripe old age of 17 years he was merely a superannuated puppy—a hardly commendable state, but one having its points. He probably met Death with the same friendly manner in which he lived. And there is something comforting in the idea of his trotting at the heels of the Invisible Stranger, assured of a kindly pat on the head.

American Fears

MOST AMERICANS today are groping for some safe and reasonably decent way to keep out of any war that may break in Europe, but finding only reasons why it couldn't be done. It isn't that this Nation has any illusions about the nobility of Britain and France, whose many perfidies in many parts of the world have been freely discussed, or that Americans owe a duty to prevent Italy from stealing country stolen by France and administered by her with the peculiar French gift for corruption in government plus the French selfishness. And certainly nobody regards England as the mother country of the United States or feels any affection for the unlovable English people or obligation to help them defend their holdings and their lives.

The grievances and the fears which chill the heart are our own, and the whole Nation would welcome any sign that Hitler and Germany, the aggressors, were willing to call it off, reduce armament, let us alone and live in peace. Should war come, this country cannot permit Germany or Italy to lick Canada and then impose the sort of peace which the Kaiser's Germany intended to inflict had he won the Great War and which the allies instead imposed on Germany and Austria. Germany and Italy would be dangerous neighbors in Bermuda and the West Indies, and with Britain and France out of the way and, perhaps, even turned against us in resentment, the United States would be a set-up.

IT IS ONE THING to read that the German press ridicules our apprehension and scoffs at the nervousness of a people protected by wide oceans. That does sound reassuring, but it doesn't explain away the probabilities of the future beyond a European war, nor is there comfort in the Fuehrer's well-earned reputation for revising his plans and revoking his promises. He seems to have a mission to hurt, defeat and humiliate the nations that humiliated Germany 20 years ago for the joy of revenge and a plan to take them one by one, if possible.

There is something very mysterious about the Russian phase of this, for always, up to a year or less ago, it was Russia and the Bolsheviks whom Hitler hated, but lately there have been queer signs. Russia, under Stalin, has imitated Hitlerism, and Hitler himself, step by step, has been forced to adopt for the German people the very form of government which he promised to save them from. Private property enjoys only a nominal existence in Germany, and the capitalist who thinks he owns his plant is merely managing it for the state. Let him try to exercise some of the rights of ownership and he soon learns. They now have little to compromise, and there have been hints in the news that a compromise is being considered; but, regardless of that possibility, France, Britain and, in a deferred position on the list, this country, the contemptible democracies, are the subjects of his hatred.

THERE ARE MANY in this country who minimize the danger and prefer to suspect that President Roosevelt has created a war scare to blur embarrassments on the home political and economic front. That is a painful accusation and one which gives aid and comfort to Hitler, but it deserves a hearing and cannot be dismissed as un-American or unpatriotic. If persons of that mind have information or arguments to dissolve the threats which others think they see in the state of things and the portents, they may save the country from a terrible folly, and one man's reputation or place in history is not worth a war.

Meanwhile, be it observed, the President is making the decisions which commit the country to the job of bottle-holders in the democratic corner, should war come, and almost certainly to active help should things go badly in that corner. The people of the country read and hear about armaments and see the leaders choosing up sides and have not been consulted and have no way of expressing themselves. War they certainly do not want, but nobody has been able to get the floor for them. Perhaps the American people, if consulted, would say that if Britain and France must fight such a war, that is just their hard luck, and, after all, only another war in the long series of wars between jostling European countries, and decide to take their chances on the future, even though Hitler and Mussolini, with that one under their belts, might be much tougher then. For God's sake, don't anybody blow a bugle now!

Capper Offers Bill To Defend Poor In U. S. Courts

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday introduced a bill to provide for the appointment of a public defender in the United States District Court here, and another measure to set up similar offices in all Federal district courts.

"The proper defense of indigent persons accused of crime," he said, "is a necessary counterpart of public prosecution. The state should shield the innocent as well as protect society against the criminal."

Senator Capper's bill, similar to measures introduced in the Senate and House last Congress, provides for the appointment of a public defender and aids.

A Washington-Rio Axis?

By Glenn Levin Swiggett

Is This The Purpose Of Aranha's Visit?

THE RECENT REPORT that Plinio Salgada, leader of the suppressed Integralist Action Party, had been captured in the city of Sao Paulo, was doubtless of some local interest in Brazil. The rumor that another conspiracy against the Vargas government had been nipped in the bud by Salgada's arrest is, however, of special interest in the United States on the eve of the arrival on February 8 of Vargas' dynamic minister of foreign affairs, Oswaldo Aranha.

There may be some connection between capture and conspiracy, and there may not be. After the reported Salgada conspiracy of last May, which was a bit suggestive of palace politics, one is inclined to think that the Integralist "Green Shirts" may serve the government somewhat as a smoke screen in a manner similar to the Iron Guard in Rumania. Despite denials, many acts of the two governments are quite in accord with fascist principles advocated by Integralists and Iron Guards.

According to report the source of this latest conspiracy was in that bloc of southeastern subtropical virile states which not only includes Rio Grande do Sul, the native state of both Vargas and Aranha, but the world's coffee center, state and city, Sao Paulo, the traditional home of Brazil's Presidents. And that's just the rub. On changing from empire to republic in 1889 Sao Paulo assumed the right, maintained almost continuously until 1930, to name the Presidents of Brazil.

In that year one Paulista, Washington Luiz Pereira de Souza was President. Another, Dr Julio Prestes, governor of the state of Sao Paulo, had been duly elected to succeed him. The rival candidate was Dr Getulio Vargas, governor of the state of Rio Grande do Sul. Prestes was to have been inaugurated President on November 15. But early in October a successful revolt under the leadership of Vargas set in which swept him into the provisional Presidency, with recognition by the United States one week in advance of the scheduled date for the inauguration of Prestes, the last Paulista President in Brazil.

Odds Favor Aranha As Vargas' Successor

SAO PAULO, naturally, does not easily accept this change of control of national affairs. Since Vargas' first military coup in 1930 there has been unrest among the Paulistas. In 1932 there was a major uprising against the Vargas government which, it seems, Sao Paulo might have won, except for the betrayal of a neighbor state, due doubtless to personal jealousies.

The Vargas coup of last year changed Brazil's republican form of government into a corporative state. That makes increasingly difficult his displacement as President, with federal police-armies and interventors, instead of governors, in the Brazilian states. Unless all signs fail he will name his successor, and that successor will doubtless be Oswaldo Aranha, who was recalled as Washington Ambassador to become his ace cabinet adviser, following the Vargas coup of 1930.

Aranha will be 45 years old on February 15. He is 12 years younger than Vargas. Their political careers suggest a common political destiny. Aranha was secretary of state to Vargas when the latter was at the head of the state government of Rio Grande do Sul. Theirs is almost a classic friendship. Their culture suggests that they, too, may have thought of this. One must not forget that Aranha was trained in Paris at l'Ecole des Hautes Etudes. Latin-American diplomats seldom ignore the tie of training that binds them to European institutions. Catch them off guard and they betray this training. That is apparent to all who have had the pleasure of knowing intimately these gracious, cultured Latin-American diplomats.

Oswaldo Aranha comes to Washington to discuss matters of great and equal importance by the two governments, as President Roosevelt stated in his invitation of January 9, just one month to the day after the opening of the Lima Conference, where the American delegation was unable to secure a continental pact of common defense against non-American aggressor states which it was understood at the President's press conference of November 15 last was to be the major objective of the American delegation and, presumably therefore, of the conference.

True Significance Of Conversations

ONE CAN ONLY speculate as to the nature of the Aranha-Hull conversations. Unless diplomacy is playing tricks the inference is safe that trade, finance and similar matters will not have the prime importance now publicly given by both Washington and Brazil. O Globo, Rio de Janeiro's outstanding pro-United States journal of Herbert Moses, says that the result of this visit of Aranha will be a Rio de Janeiro-Washington axis which "should reunite the countries of the continent, thus forming an American bloc capable of acting in an extraordinary way."

That would mean that measures of mutual defense are the primary object of this visit. If so, it is a most interesting fact that President Roosevelt begins these two-party conversations first with Brazil, provided, as has been said, that it is the intention of the State Department to follow up this procedure with other Latin-American states. Both for reasons of friendship and precedent the President was wise.

The traditional friendship of Brazil and the United States is a matter of history. The United States was first to recognize that government in Brazil directly responsible for each of the three changes of form of government. That was true of Brazil's imperial government, and some 60-odd years later of the republic. And again true in 1930 when it recognized the present government of Getulio Vargas. The friendship of Brazil has well served the Pan-American program of the United States. It was the only Latin-American state that really met the implied wishes of President Wilson in regard to entering the World War. Eight of them, including such states as Mexico, Argentina and Chile, remained neutral.

Assuming that mutual defense is to be the major topic of the Aranha-Hull conversations, Brazil offers as precedent a curious example at this time. In May, 1824, only six months after the declaration of the Monroe Doctrine, Brazil's first charge d'affaires, Silvestre Rebollo, was received in Washington. This recognition by the United States gave to Brazil at the time the protective interest of the Monroe Doctrine; and gives to it now, therefore, the distinction of being the first Latin-American state to seek the protection of the United States from the aggressions, real or imagined, by a non-American state.

But there is another point in this connection even more curious. Silvestre Rebollo carried with him a proposal of his chief, Carvalho e Mello, minister of foreign affairs, for "a concert of American powers to sustain the general system of American independence." The proposal came to nothing. John Quincy Adams rejected it, since Brazil's intention to pay for this protective service was declared to be incompatible with American policy.

It will indeed be strange if after more than a century the United States should now undertake a common continental defense program by perfecting first a series of mutual bilateral pacts, beginning with a friendly foreign minister of Brazil, one of whose predecessors in office had proposed, and had rejected, a similar pact 116 years ago.

Curtain Of Silence

By Ernest K. Lindley

Hopkins Prepares

THE MOST MYSTERIOUS silence in Washington is that which surrounds the new Secretary of Commerce. The owner of one of the readiest tongues in the Roosevelt Administration has retired into the deep, quiet recesses of the most luxurious office suite built and paid for by the Federal Government. For all that is known by the general public, Harry L. Hopkins, since his confirmation by the Senate, has been dozing in an overstuffed chair in front of an open fire—both comforts having been supplied to the private office of the Secretary of Commerce by Herbert Hoover.

No one would begrudge Harry Hopkins a few days of ease after what he has been through during the last few years, and especially the last few weeks. He has been spending a great deal of his time in easy chairs, both in his office and in his modest house in Georgetown—not in recuperation from an ordeal but in preparation for an exceptionally difficult and important task. While comfortably seated he has been listening and talking.

THE HOPKINS conversations are probably the most significant in relation to the whole domestic front that are going on in Washington at present. They are with two groups of people; businessmen and members of the Administration whose duties are of direct interest to business. Already he has held long, individual conversations with 30 or more prominent industrialists and businessmen. Some of them are members of the Business Advisory Council—a group formed by Secretary Roper—which met in Washington last week for a "get-together" meeting with the new Secretary of Commerce. Others are businessmen who have had very little contact with the Roosevelt Administration, at least during the last few years. Among them are representative small businessmen.

At the same time Mr. Hopkins has been talking over with members of the Administration some of the specific things that might be done to bring about a better feeling between businessmen and the Federal Government.

In his conversations the new Secretary of Commerce has made it plain that he is not thinking in terms of panaceas, or miracles, or sharp changes in New Deal policies. He has made clear his belief that the New Deal is here to stay. He has talked, rather, in specific and practical terms, with the emphasis on the expansion of industrial production. Although he has not ignored, in his conversations, larger foreign trade, especially with Latin America, he has put the home market first.

THERE IS NO DOUBT whatsoever that Harry Hopkins conceives his duty to be to do everything that he can, within the framework of the New Deal, to smooth the path for business recovery. There is no doubt, either, that businessmen, in considerable numbers, have accepted the main framework of the New Deal as permanent and are interested only in making the economic elevator work in this new structure.

The first fruit of the Hopkins conversations probably will be the recruiting for active service of several businessmen of recognized standing. Already two or three have undertaken for him confidential studies of specific problems. If Harry Hopkins' powers of persuasion hold up, he may be able to announce that two or three others have accepted, at least, temporarily, official positions in the Department of Commerce. He has indicated that he wants not only a full knowledge of what businessmen are thinking, but the day-by-day assistance of a small staff of business leaders.

Since NRA days, the Roosevelt Administration has contained few businessmen, and most of them—including Joseph P. Kennedy and John W. Hanes—have been representatives of finance and banking rather than of industrial production and distribution. The President remarked a few years ago that he could use 50 first-class, progressive businessmen. Two or three could be very helpful if they were put in the right places. The right places, at present, are close to Harry Hopkins, who knows better than anyone, except the President, what can be done within the Administration and how to do it.

WHEN IT COMES to action, the Secretary of Commerce is circumscribed by the ironic fact that, by law, he has fewer powers directly affecting business than has nearly every other member of the Cabinet and any one of six or seven special Government agencies. About all he can do is to improve the business information services and, perhaps, expand the usefulness of the Bureau of Standards.

Transportation, labor policies, taxation, antitrust prosecutions, public utility policies, credit policies, wage and hour standards, regulation of the securities markets—these and other matters in which businessmen are vitally interested are outside the legal reach of Harry Hopkins. To have any influence over those vast realms he must have not only the confidence of the President, which he has, but he must hold, by infinite tact, the friendly co-operation of at least a score of top-ranking officials.

The new Secretary of Commerce has not underestimated the difficulty of his assignment. The curtain of silence he has dropped in front of himself signifies quiet and thorough preparation for a job of critical importance.

A "Secret" Shakes The World

Thompson

planes placed some months ago by Great Britain.

THE MORE RECENT purchase of planes has a peculiar, but hardly a sinister, history. Ambassador Bullitt, while he was here, told the President of the condition of airplane production in France and emphasized the fact that that country had been obliged to accept the Munich conditions mainly on account of its inferiority in the air.

The British testimony confirmed it.

Mr. Bullitt apparently told the President of the great desire of the French government to supplement its production by purchasing planes here in greater quantity than it had done until now.

The President accepted this viewpoint and realized the great urgency of the situation. To minimize red tape and gain time the French mission was authorized by the President, after consulting his Cabinet, to visit construction plants. The financial arrangements were to be conducted without the usual intermediaries of bankers and lawyers.

SOME TIME BEFORE Ambassador Bullitt left for Europe it was the intention of President Roosevelt to use the occasion of these sales to France for making another public declaration on foreign policy.

He was constrained from this, against his own judgment, because he was advised, I understand, by Mr. Bullitt that a statement might create an uproar, and that the best thing to do was to treat the whole deal in the same way that the British deal had been handled—as a matter of routine.

Unfortunately, the accident of the Douglas bomber in Los Angeles, in which a representative of the French air ministry was injured, precipitated the whole discussion.

Whether any rule was violated in this case or not is impossible to tell, as the information on this subject has been given only in the properly secret meetings of the Senate Military Committee, where this technical matter was discussed last week.

From what the papers report, a feud seems to have developed between the Army and Navy departments because the French buyers were put in the hands of the Navy authorities, who showed them planes which might be bought eventually by the Army.

THERE IS NO reason to believe that anything irregular has been done beyond a certain amount of bungling.

There is no evidence that the French will be given any special treatment in the matter of payment.

Mr. Paul Reynaud, the French finance minister, announced a few days ago that France now had sufficient gold on hand to buy immediately 5,000 planes abroad.

There is no secret agreement between the United States and France.

It is clear, however, that there is a question of American policy involved, and what that policy is cannot be a secret unless one believes that the President's recent speeches are just so much rhetoric.

On January 5, in his message to Congress, he stated his point of view as clearly as it could be stated.

Also, for the second time within the last few days, the President has stated at press conferences that American aircraft factories are at the disposal of France and England.

THE PRESIDENT'S conviction is that the world is in a state of serious and continuing crisis and that what the United States, as the most powerful economic unit in the world, does or does not do will be decisive.

He has been for years in favor of a firm stand of the democracies against the redistribution of the territory and economic assets of the world by force or by the blackmail of the threat of force.

This does not mean that he is committed to an eternal status quo.

He is far too aware of world problems to be so stupid.

He is committed, and Mr. Hull is committed, and before Mr. Hull Mr. Stimson was committed, to resist attempts to change the status quo except by negotiation and agreement.

In other words, he is committed to the only possible policy which can mean peace in the long run.

He knows that there is risk involved either way. There is risk involved whether we do anything or do nothing. As Hamilton Fish Armstrong said in "We or They," it takes two to make peace, but it only takes one to make war. That phrase, incidentally, occurs in the Republican platform of the State of Vermont.

But the President is convinced that the lesser risk lies in prevention rather than in drift.

And apparently the astonishment of the world is due to the fact that for once a democratic leader actually means what he says.

THERE IS AN element of humor in what has happened in the last five days. Hitler's speech was announced ominously and awaited with trepidation by a jittery world. Eighty million Germans were herded before radios to hear it. Millions throughout the world sat for 2 hours and 20 minutes hoping to find out what their fate would be.

Radio networks throughout the world had organized their facilities to transmit the great news. Newspapers spent fortunes cabling texts.

And the next day Mr. Roosevelt told a "secret" to 16 men in the White House, without any preparation for transmission, and the Hitler speech dropped into the waste basket as a minor event of the week.

There are millions of people in this country who wish that we were so weak that we could be spared responsibility.

In practically each American heart there is a timid soul pursuing happiness and wishing to avoid the burden and the headaches of power.

But the power is there, and in the long run it becomes by its very weight decisive.

WE CANNOT AVOID the fact that we produce nearly as much steel as all the rest of the world combined; that we produce nearly four times as many automobiles as all the rest of the world combined; that we are the greatest cash customers for the colonial empires; that we own 60 per cent of the world's gold monetary supply.

No country with such economic power can avoid international political responsibilities.

If Mr. Roosevelt paraphrased Mr. Baldwin and said that America's frontier was in France he made, in my belief, a foolish statement.

BUT IF HE had said that the last ditch of democracy was in the United States he would have made a statement which cannot be challenged by anyone.

And he does not believe that the best strategy is to drift until forced to stand alone in that last ditch—after we have assisted great mobilized totalitarian states to rebuild the world into huge new closed economic empires!

There are other elements of humor in the situation. It is really funny to find the German-controlled press suddenly defending the American Constitution as though there were something in the Constitution which prevented our having an active foreign policy!

THE FIRST GERMAN comment on Hitler's speech was derisive laughter that Britain and France should feel reassured by it.

Today the same press is expressing astonishment that Hitler's peaceful intentions were not properly understood.

Whatever are the consequences of the President's remarks in this country, it is an undeniable fact that in the world at large there is a greater hope for peace in 1939 than there was last week.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Florida Tidings

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2.—Life in this area is so screwy you would think it was all designed by Olsen and Johnson, for another Hellzapoppin show. The other night two automobiles collided . . . An ambulance picked up the injured . . . And five minutes later the ambulance crashed through a plate glass window and injured everybody all over again . . . One of the victims who had been in both accidents rubbed his head and exclaimed, "What is this, anyhow, the daily double?"

There is no driver anywhere as unpredictable as the Florida driver . . . Except a visiting driver who, as soon as he gets here, thinks he is a Florida driver . . . The motorcycle cops are in a constant state of confusion . . . They can't tell whether they are chasing or being chased.

Miami and the beach seem as jammed as ever, but you hear the same old complaint that business is off . . . Surrounded, jostled, elbowed and trampled on by a howling mob, a man's first words when he gets to his feet will be, "The crowd isn't here this year!"

Miami's leading industries: fender repairing and tip sheet printing . . . With four dog tracks operating, a third horse race track has just opened . . . The fishing boats would do more business here if they would eliminate fishing rods and carry punchboards.

Hialeah seems to have bigger crowds (in the grandstand, not the clubhouse), but the play is off . . . And, believe it or not, even Mr. Widener, always immune to it until this season, has succumbed to the practice of slowing up the parade to the post in order to increase the receipts . . . They take longer to get the beetles to the post at Hialeah than they did at Tropical . . . This week they are taking them away up into the Seminole Indian reservations . . . A horse may be a 3-year-old when he leaves the paddock, but he is 4 years old when he gets to a Florida barrier.

The pink flamingoes are more numerous than ever, but the flock seems listless . . . Maybe they've given up trying to beat the horses, too . . . A jockey who was suspended for alleged crookedness is now the toast of Florida racing . . . He's winning so many races that a visitor remarked, "That goes to show what's wrong with jockeys: they don't suspend enough of 'em."

The cold weather in the North is now booming tropical resort business . . . Nothing depresses a hotel man here like a rumor that it has stopped snowing in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and points West . . . Study in irony or something . . .

Washington Housewives Prefer Dainty Sweets, Suggestions in Candy Contest Indicate

Turkish Delight Wins First Prize; Opera Fudge, Citrus Peel Recipe Next

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

WASHINGTON has a "sweet tooth," if recent contest entries in The Post candy competition are any indication. According to the variety of home-tested candy formulas submitted, local housewives prefer dainty sweets to the "jaw-breaker" types.

Among the more pleasant were such delicacies as French dainties, filled with fruits; velvet molasses kisses, candy applets, coffee praline patties and almond cream taffy. Most decorative was a recipe for candy cards, whose gelatine and confectioners' sugar base made them adaptable as designs for candy calling cards, Valentines or playing cards.

No candy contest could deserve such a name without several kinds of fudge. Chocolate and nut fudges led this field, with creamy grand opera fudge taking several curtain calls. Caramel, "Holiday" and "Festive" fudges were in evidence also, along with a trio of exciting new varieties called Tyrolean fudge, mock wine fudge and peppermint fudge. Divinity fudges ranged from simple vanilla and black walnut assortments to divinities rolled in peanut butter circles.

One entry which would have delighted the souls of little girls who play house and plan kindergarten candy parties was a recipe for Marzipan. This German sweet was so carefully recorded that even very tiny cooks might have successfully prepared this almond fondant and then rolled it out into vegetables and fruit shapes, or into more solid looking bolognas and beef steaks. The Marzipan "varnish," made of spirits of wine and gum arabic, was also simply given for the benefit of big and little candy cooks.

Moslem Influence

Literature and art have spoken of the delicacy of Moslem sweetmeats and candies. A derivation from their culture, worthy of a sultan, is Turkish delight, an example of which has been awarded today's first prize of $3. Mrs. Sarah Ungar, 1405 Crittenden street northwest, is the winner. Mrs. Ungar's use of raisins with nuts and fruit juices was felt to be a pleasant variation of this celebrated sweetmeat theme.

Turkish Delight

Heat 2 cups of sugar with ¼ teaspoon of salt and ½ cup of boiling water. Heat to boiling point. Pour ½ cup of cold water in a bowl and sprinkle 2 envelopes of gelatine on top of water. Add softened gelatine to the hot sirup until dissolved. Boil slowly for 20 minutes. Add ¼ cup of orange juice and 2 tablespoons of lemon juice to hot mixture and add a little red coloring, paste or liquid. Allow to cool, and when starting to thincken add ½ cup of chopped nut meats and ½ cup of raisins. Pour into a pan that has been rinsed with water and allow to cool until candy is thick and firm. With a wet, sharp knife, loosen around edges of pan, turn out on board lightly covered with powdered sugar. Cut in cubes and roll in powdered sugar.

Festive Fancy

As light and airy as its name implies is the opera fudge which has been awarded second prize of $2. Mrs. Gerrit Snyder, 4780 Twenty-first road, North Arlington, Va., is the winner.

MRS. SNYDER

Chocolate Opera Fudge

Put 2 squares of bitter chocolate into a saucepan and set over hot water. When melted, add alternately and gradually, 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of medium cread. Add 1 teaspoon of white corn sirup and a pinch of salt. Boil to a firm soft ball 230 degrees F. Let cool to about 98 degrees. Beat and work like a fondant. When it can be handled, knead until creamy, flavor with orange extract to taste. Shape into balls or patties. Let crust. When quite cold, dip in French vanilla dipping chocolate. Let harden in a cold room. Put a pecan half in the center of each pattie. Vary this candy by omitting the chocolate and by dividing fudge into portions, flavoring and coloring each portion differently with orange, vanilla or almond extract.

Citrus Suggestion

The recipe suggestion of Mrs. John R. Long, 352 West Patrick street, Frederick, Md., has been awarded a prize of $1. Her entry is a timely one, for citrus fruits have not been so reasonable or plentiful in years. It was not this seasonable trait which won over the judges, however. It was the simplicity of Mrs. Long's grapefruit and orange peel formula.

Candied Orange and Grapefruit Peel

Remove the loose pulp and skin from the inside of peel from 4 oranges and 4 grapefruit. With scissors cut in thin strips. Cover with water and cook for 20 minutes. Drain and cool. Cover again with water. Cook for 20 minutes longer, drain and cool again. Now add 3 cups of sugar and 1½ cups of water. Cook until sirup is practically absorbed by peel. Drain and roll lightly in dry sugar. This may be cooked in the oven if preferred.

Snowy Sweet

As blinding-white as snow is the entry submitted by Mrs. Stanley Smith, Box 446, Manassas, Va. So lovely to look at and so delicate in flavor was her white fudge that the judges accorded her a prize of $1.

White Fudge

Combine 3 cups of sugar with 1 teaspoon of cream of tartar, ¼ teaspoon of cream of tartar, of light cream. Cook, stirring only until dissolved to a soft ball stage, 236 degrees F. Wipe sides of a pan with a damp cloth while cooking. Add 1 tablespoon of butter. Cool to lukewarm, 110 degrees. Add 1½ teaspoons of vanilla extract. Beat until thick. Add ¼ cup of chopped dates, ¼ cup of chopped candied cherries and ½ cup of chopped nut meats. Pour into a greased 8-inch-square pan. When cool cut in squares.

Old Fashioned Crackle

Some of the quaint charm of the past comes to mind with the very mention of popcorn bars. They suggest open fires and sewing bees and the preparation of golden corn about to be popped for delicious candy bars. A prize of $1 has been awarded to Mrs. M. E. Bernard, of Manassas, Va., for her candy.

Popcorn Candy Bars

Put 1 quart of freshly made popcorn through a food chopper, using a coarse blade. Combine 1 cup of brown sugar, 1 cup of granulated sugar, 1 cup of milk and 1 tablespoon of dark corn sirup. Cook, stirring only until sugar dissolves to a soft ball stage, 236 degrees F. Wipe sugar crystals from sides of pan with damp cloth. Cool until lukewarm (110 degrees), add ¼ cup of peanut butter, 1 teaspoon of vanilla extract and ⅛ teaspoon of salt. Beat until creamy, add 1 quart of popcorn and beat until thick. Press into a greased pan about 7 inches square. Cut in bars.

Stain Remover

Use an eraser of the sprongy type for removing small smudges on wall paper and light-colored woodwork. Work quickly, in up and down strokes. Wipe off the fragments of the eraser with a soft, clean cloth.

The cocoanut balls, fudge and other sweetmeats shown above are typical of the candies for which recipes were submitted in The Post's contest, the results of which are announced today. Below are the three contest judges, Mrs. Ione Dennis, Mrs. Harry S. Wender and Mrs. Morris Fradin

Bought Puddings To Be Theme Of New Contest

Prepared puddings will serve as the theme for the new Post recipe contest at the request of Mrs. Margaret Belair, 118 South Fairfax street, Alexandria, Va. This contest follower has a practical culinary viewpoint in mind when she writes: "How about a contest featuring puddings, especially tricks with prepared puddings? I am sure every housewife has had to fall back on packaged puddings at some time when in haste. I feel that they can be very pleasant when properly dressed up."

Do you share this opinion? Do you feel that a fillip of whipped cream, fruit sauce, caramel custard or chopped nuts can make a de luxe edition out of the most humble of packaged puddings? Or have you some completely original method of preparing a chocolate-pecan or cherry-cornstarch pudding?

Whatever your secret fornula for making bought puddings taste like home-baked ones, enter your kitchen-tested resipe at once. All carefully written entries must be mailed to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor, before February 11.

Cash awards include: First prize, $3.00; second, $2.00, and three additional prizes of $1.00 each.

How to Use Honey In Role of Sugar

Use honey to candy sweet potatoes and other vegetables. Pour a half cup of honey over a baking ham. But when substituting honey for sugar have a care; honey is almost one-fifth water and its use requires that the liquid of a recipe be reduced even more than a fifth. Honey has the same consistency as molasses and may be used in place of it, measure for measure, in gingerbread, brown bread and steamed puddings. Honey absorbs moisture from the air, therefore frostings and cakes containing it will keep moist a long time—a decided advantage when making soft cookies or fruit cake.

Vacuum Cleaner Needs Care

To get best service from a vacuum cleaner, the dust bag should be emptied after each use. For the bag must act as a filter, which allows the air to pass through easily but which retains the dust. If the bag is full of dust, some dirt will be forced out along with the air—and resettle in the freshly cleaned room.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Divorced From Philanderer, Woman Weds Old Beau Who Can't Support Her; What's Next Step?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am confronted by a very disturbing problem and would like your advice on it. I married the second time on the wellknown rebound. I had been married to a philanderer, and at the time we parted I wasn't in love with my husband, but my emotions were deeply involved and my pride had been badly hurt. Not very sound reasons for jumping from the trying pan into the fire, but contributing factors, nevertheless.

My second husband was an old flame to whom I had once been engaged, when we were quite young, and the engagement was broken by mutual consent at our families' insistence. I had not seen him for ten years, until after my divorce, and then, after a whirlwind courtship, we married. I knew his shortcomings before and I can't understand by what flight of fancy I decided he had changed completely in ten years.

First of all, he grossly misrepresented his financial standing at the time of marriage. I was not looking for some one to support me, but on the other hand I definitely did not expect to assume full support of my husband—and that has been my lot, during all but six months of our two years of marriage. And during those six months he had only part time employment. I don't believe he is lazy. He tells me he looks unceasingly for employment, and I cannot confirm or disaprove the statement. Frankly, since his qualifications are very limited, I believe his chances of finding employment are remote, though I have never said this for fear of discouraging him.

He was reared by an indulgent grandmother, who did a rather thorough job of spoiling him. But from what I gather she has refused to help him since our marriage, although financially able to do so. Perhaps her position is justifiable. Not knowing the representations he made to me, his family may be entitled to think I was either a psychopathic case or desperate for a husband, to have married him when he had no job and no money. He had previously been married and has a child for whose support his former wife is responsible.

I feel that I cannot continue much longer in the present circumstances. My salary is adequate for one, but provides only barest necessities for two. I have incurred several large doctors' bills since marriage that I am unable to pay. I have obligations to my mother, and I feel that I cannot push these into the background in order to provide for an able-bodied husband. Increasing bills and financial problems have worried me to such an extent that I am cross, nervous and irritable, and our relations are strained. I am no longer in love with him, but I do feel sorry for him and don't like to hurt him.

I have talked to him about returning to his home and have said that if he finds he can make a living for me there, I will join him. It would be foolish for me to give up my position and go home with him, without knowing what would be in store for us there. But he refuses to go home alone as he doesn't want to admit defeat to his family. It seems to me a strange sort of pride which keeps him here with things as they are.

I don't feel that going from one marriage to another is a very dignified proceeding, and I have tried earnestly to make this second venture a success. I think financial reverses have been our biggest stumbling block, but even with these obviated there are other factors (which I won't attempt to go into here) which make me wonder whether the marriage would have been a success under different conditions. As it is I feel that I have done my utmost to make the best of a bad bargain, and that I can't continue in this fashion any longer. I shall appreciate any suggestion you have for correcting this comedy of errors. Most sincerely,

WORRIED.

The Ethical Procedure

DEAR WORRIED: When a serious mistake has been made, and that mistake belatedly recognized, obviously the only ethical, common sense procedure thereafter is to undo that mistake insofar as is possible. In this instance, you recognize your second marriage to have been an almost crazy mistake; a case, indeed, of "out of the frying pan into the fire." Entirely devoid of financial security, temperamental compatability and future promise, the union is working progressively to the personal and social detriment of both parties. As I see it, nothing is keeping you two together except a shamed and cowardly reluctance to admit publicly what both of you know, intimately, to be an incontrovertible fact—namely, that you should never have taken the foolish step in the first place.

If you "have obligations to (your) mother," and she lives in this city, I would suggest, as a first step toward "correcting this comedy of errors," that you take up residence with her, as a means of cutting down expenses, until your outstanding indebtedness has been cleared off or substantially reduced; and that you insist, with unyielding firmness, on your husband's returning to his own people for support, until such time as he can support himself. If that day never comes, he must learn to look to them—not to you—for succor, since you have prior obligations both to your mother and yourself.

Although it may seem to you at the moment that the situation couldn't possibly be worse, don't overlook the fact that the existence of children could further complicate matters to an almost intolerable degree. Then, indeed, would you be hard put to it to find the honorable and saving solution. It seems to me you have much to be thankful for, in having only yourself and the man (and your respective creditors) to consider. I think, now, if ever, is the time to act to bring your own life under more seemly control; to disentangle your affairs from the affairs of a man who, so far as one can judge, shows no intention whatsoever of assuming a fair share of responsibility toward himself and society. To stay with him is, in my opinion, to allow yourself to be dragged, day by day, further and further into a maelstrom of economic, social and emotional confusion.

Colonial Cookery

Apple Fritter Recipe, Century Old Is Given

Apples are reasonable in price and plentiful during the winter months, which usually mark a scarcity of fresh fruits. For both economy of price and delicacy of flavor, few recipes could be more adaptable to this time of year than the Williamsburg apple fritters, below. Drafted from an early 1831 recipe of a Virginia gentlewoman, this authentic apple recipe has recently been brought to life by the bureau of research and records of Colonial Williamsburg, Incorporated.

Williamsburg Apple Fritters

Peel and core six apples and cut them in thin slices. Soak them for two hours in brandy (or lemon juice). Dip them in batter and fry them in a kettle of boiling fat, or you may saute them in butter.

BATTER: Beat two egg yolks and add ¼ cup of rich milk, ¼ cup of cold water, 1 tablespoonful of brandy (or lemon juice), and 1 tablespoonful of melted butter. Sift in 1 cup of flour, 2 tablespoonfuls of sugar and ¼ teaspoonful of salt. Mix quickly, then stir in lightly 2 well-beaten egg whites.

International Line-up in Dolls

Waiting for the Taxi

"Now I do hope we can get a cab before too much of the crowd gets out. Let's stand right here, and George'll get out and signal one . . . Say, George, try to get an Emerald. . . . I said Get an Emerald! . . . You know I don't like get in with just any of these drivers. You never can tell where they might take you . . . Ethel, you better pick up your train. They ought to do something about these sidewalks—oh, here comes an Emerald, George! . . . He's not doing a thing about it . . . George! Hey, taxi! Taxi! . . . Oh, it's got somebody in it! That WOULD be our luck!

"I wish you would look at that crowd pouring out. I do wish George would hurry up—oh, there's one stopping! Taxi! Hold it, George! . . . Well of all things! Look at George letting those people push in ahead of him. He WOULD do that—oh, here comes a Ruby! Well, I wouldn't mind taking a Ruby. George! Grab this Ruby! . . . Oh, there he let those people take it right away from him! I never saw such a man. Now look at Bob Butcher over there grabbing a cab. One thing certain, the Butchers can always look out for themselves.

"Say, you know we've got to get out there and prod George up a little or we'll never get home tonight . . . Watch out, Maude, for that little puddle. They ought to do something about these wet streets . . . George, you've simply got to step out and grab the next taxi—now I wish you'd look at that limousine push in. Honestly there ought to be a law—oh, here comes a Topaz! Grab it, George! Taxi! Taxi! . . . Well of all the nerve! . . . What? . . . Well, I don't care if those other people had signaled, we had as much right to it as they did.

"Say, do you know everybody's walking down the street? That's why they're getting all the cabs . . . Say, George, we'll never get a cab here . . . Let's walk down . . . Well, but those other people get cabs by moving around . . . Stand still? . . . Say, that's just what's been the matter with us all our lives. Come on, let's go on down a piece. Watch out there, Mabel! Honestly they ought to do something about those starlings.

"Well, if there aren't more people down here than there were up there! Push up there to the front, George. Honestly, people are just like savages when they get in a crowd. Oh, here comes an Emerald! Grab it, George! Taxi! . . . Beg pardon, this is OUR cab . . . Well, but my husband signaled, too . . . Well, of all the nerve! Honestly, women have no ethics in a crowd. Oh, here comes an Opal! I'd even take that . . . No, it won't stop. Well, we're just the kind that always gets left. If George would only be more aggressive.

"Now, let's hold our places right out here in front—George, don't let those people push in there! Just because that woman has a moth-eaten mink coat, she need not think—What? . . . Well, I don't care if they do hear. We were here before they were and they had no business pushing in. Women have no ethics—Oh, there is another Emerald! Taxi! George, why didn't you signal? . . . Well, I don't care if it was full, you could at least have signaled.

Say, you know, I'm getting tired of this. I'm going to get a cab myself. Hey, taxi! Taxi! Why don't they stop? Taxi! Taxi! Oh here's one! Where's George, Maude, Ethel—here . . . Beg pardon, this is MY taxi . . . No, indeed, I signaled first . . . No sir, I—Oh Mr. Burlap! I didn't recognize you. Why, how do you do, Mrs. Burlap? Oh, no, you go ahead and take the taxi. Oh no, no, we're in no hurry at all. George'll have one in a minute, No that's perfectly all right. Good night.

"Well of all the gall! Did you see those Burlaps take that taxi away from me? Where's George? Oh say, he's got a taxi! Hold it, George! We're coming. What is this—a Rhinestone? I never heard of that before, but I guess we'll have to take a chance. Now you get in first, Ethel . . . now Maude. George we can make room for you back here . . . Oh well, all right . . . No, he says he wants to sit up there. No, you simply can't do a thing with him. Now then, is everybody in? All right. Oh wait! George, did you tell the driver where we wanted to go?"

Baby Doesn't Care But Gay Nursery Pleases Mother

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MAYBE BABY doesn't care whether the nursery walls are decorated with pink elephants or purple puppies, but it makes a big difference to mother. So for her pleasure, a pretty nursery for the littlest one is worth more than the trouble and expense it takes to furnish it.

For mother's convenience, too, we might add—for a nursery is not a luxury, it's a time and nerve saver for all concerned. A separate place for all of baby's trappings, a quiet place for him to rest, a handy organization of his things to make caring for him so much easier . . . these are but a few of the reasons why it's important to try your best to squeeze out space in the house and a few pennies in your budget to have a nursery for the baby.

If you're still not convinced, then think back to the babies you've known who have been tucked here and there all over the house with no concentrated place for all their things, no secluded spot to rest away from the turmoil and to-do of the family.

Your Figure Madam

Medicine Ball Aids Woman To Rival Daughter

AT A beauticians' convention in New York, one of the surprise features was a series of exercises performed by two young women whose faces were turned away from the audience. Both were supple and beautifully slim but one seemed to put more verve into her performance than the other.

On finishing, they faced the audience and were introduced as Miss Reilly and Grandma Reilly. It was Grandma Reilly, 67 years old and the mother of seven, who had been going through her exercises with such dash!

In spite of the fact that she is approaching 70, she has these perfect measurements: bust, 34 inches; hips, 33 inches; waist, 26½ inches. She is 5 feet 2½ inches tall and weighs 122 pounds.

Works Out and Every Day

Her son, Harold J. Reilly, prescribes the exercises she follows and says: "Mother is too proud of her figure to neglect her exercises for even a day. She likes looking slim and youthful when most of the women her age have rocking-chair figures." So Grandma Reilly exercises for five to 10 minutes every day, and three times a week she has a workout at the gymnasium, under her son's supervision.

All her exercises are of the stretching and posture improvement type favored by Reilly, who has spent 22 years keeping people fit and whose first advice to anyone beginning an exercise program is "See your doctor and have your heart and blood pressure checked."

After that, you are all set for some exercises that are really different. They were originated by Reilly and require the use of a 6-pound medicine ball—that's the weight best suited to the average woman. If you will do them carefully and faithfully you may be able to add to your height and you can subtract any number of inches from your width. Almost anyone, Reilly believes, can add one-fourth inch to her height.

Bouncing Helps Thighs

Begin with the "Halleluhah exercise" which firms loose flesh on the backs of the upper arms and wears the excess off ribs and shoulders . . . Hold the medicine ball high overhead in both hands and stand with feet slightly apart. With the arms in this position, toss the ball into the air, catching it before it before it falls lower than the top of the head. Four or five times will be enough for a beginning. Don,t lower the arms during the exercise.

To mold and slim the thighs, hold the ball in both hands in front of the body and bring one knee up and the ball down simultaneously so that the ball is bounced smartly on the thigh. Alternate legs. Begin with 25 times and very gardually increase to 100, then to 200 times.

Warns Against Overdoing

To banish fat pads on the sides of the hips, get down on the floor with weight resting on the right arm, the right hip and the feet. Roll the hip about on the ball. This affords a combination of exercise and massage which, Reilly assures us, is hard to beat.

When you have done a thorough job of that one, lean the small of the back against the ball, knees flexed and feet on the floor. Keeping the feet in the same spot, work backward on the ball, stretching your body.

For a slim waist and strong tummy muscles, stand about a foot from the wall, holding the medicine ball in both hands. Stretch the arms high overhead and reach back to touch the ball to the wall. Return ball to floor. relax, and repeat.

The use of the medicine ball is apt to prove tiring and our expert warns against overdoing your exercises at the beginning. After you have conditioned yourself to exercise, however, you should be able to take it in fairly large doses. And once you are in shape, you can keep as trim as Grandma Reilly with a five to 10-minute workout a day!

Modern Doll In 3 Dimensions Shown Here

Angular Model Mingles With Curved Beauties at Exhibit

By Genevieve Reynolds.

MODERN DOLLS are streamlined and smartly dressed. No bulges of fat or voluptuous curves show through their trim, sleek-fitted costumes. Sardinian natives go a step further and borrow ideas from the scientists. Their newest creation is a three-dimensional doll made of black wood and dressed in a soft felt frock of many colors. It is designed to harmonize with modernistic furnishings, rather than for a little girl's nursery. This doll, along with about 1,000 more, are in the Kimport doll exhibit at one of the local department stores.

All snobbery, ill humor and discord are absent among the dolls. Queen Mother Mary, bedecked in ermine and purple coronation robes, smiles at a humble Irish pixie with his pick and shovel. A gourd man from East Africa winks at a Bahaman woman made of sponges and shells.

Mennonite men and women with somber faces, and long, black, untrimmed costumes, stand beside a Crete with hip length coat and knee breeches. This huge and varied collection of dolls began as a hobby with the McKim family of Independence, Mo. While traveling in Europe a few years ago members of the family bought a doll in each country that they visited for the small girl of the family. After their return home the family started importing dolls for their personal use and later decided to offer them for sale.

Glamour Girls of Cafe Society Stage 'Singin' Bee;' Winner Gets Job at Night Club

New York, Feb. 2.

OF ALL the night spots in town, the one that keeps going hardest and fastest is the small deadfall on East Fifty-third street known as the Stork Club, run by that kindly Oklahoman named Sherman Billingsley. His operating technique is flawless and his oasis zooms along when bigger, fancier saloons stagger, faint and die.

ALICE HUGHES

A few nights ago Sherm went into the bag and pulled out an old one that is forever good—if it clicks. It was a "singin' bee" for the girls of cafe society, and no less than 13 of these dainty beauties stood right smack up to the mike and gave out. Two of the judges were Beatrice Lillie and Clifton Webb, which just shows you how well the spot stands with people who really count. Even more remarkable was the fact that some of the cuties could really sing.

The learned judges picked as winner one Betty Randall, a minx with flashing black eyes and a rich, melodious voice. The prize was a job singing at the Maison Billingsley, and even as this is written, her parents' permission having been given, the colorful Betty is now warbling there for pay. I don't know how much pay, but some.

The stork was packed and jammed to the very snood for this great artistic event, and you may be sure that only the very best people got into feast their eyes and ears. So Sherm was happy, all the right people were charmed, and no doubt Betty Randall was happy at winning this battle of the larynxes—which goes to show just how little it takes to please a small bunch of folks!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We hope to have a look at the pretty, suffering little Viennese doll, Luise Rainer, when and if Sidney Kingsley stages his dramatization of that wondrous novel, "The Outward Room," in the future. Speaking of young actresses, the highly talented Janet Fox has a role in "The American Way" at the Center Theater. She's the niece of Edna Ferber, but her part is not as big as that played by Freddy March or Florence Eldridge. She's a swell trouper, as all know who saw her in "Having Wonderful Time." That was the play which brought fame to Katherine Locke and John (then Jules) Garfield.

That boy, by the way, is now the top lad of the newcomers in films. Tyrone Power and Bobby Taylor, take notice.

Gracie Moore started something the other day when she jangled a bracelet for each year of her married life—in her case, seven. One of the local stores picked up the idea, quick as a wink, and now you can get them in sterling silver. But how about 25 for the silver wedding? Too heavy!

Colorful Army-Navy Reception at White House Is Most Glamorous and Largest of Season

Officers in All Their Braided Glory Steal Show From Traditional Diplomatic Affair; Wives Also Take No Back Seats

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

WINDING UP the official White House calendar for 1938-39, the Army-Navy reception last evening turned out to be a kind of Old Home Week with a "service" accent. High ranking Army, Navy and Marine officers, who, in many instances, see each other only once a year gathered, greeted the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and then collected in little groups in the State Dining Room, the Red Room and the scarlet-carpeted hallway to shake hands with each other and exchange reminiscences on experiences they had shared at posts around the world.

HOPE R. MILLER

The most glamorous of the five receptions at the White House this season, last evening's was also the biggest. Services sets, almost 1,300 strong, came early and stayed late to enjoy one of the most colorful events that have made social history this year. Trim uniforms, embellished with ropes of gold braid and decorations . . . lovely ladies gowned in shimmering satin, filmy chiffon and billowing taffeta . . . Army, Navy and Marine Corps sons and daughters thronged into the East Room; filed down the receiving line; chatted with each other, and in many cases, danced an hour or so before calling at an evening.

The impression has seeped through social Washington that the diplomatic reception, traditionally opening the White House season, is THE event of the year; but I'll vote for the Army-Navy reception any time.

Officers, in all their gold braided glory, need ask no odds from any diplomat; and service wives are the best-dressed of any group you ever see at the White House, or anywhere else for that matter.

Last evening's party followed in general plan other receptions at the Executive Mansion. Promptly at 9 o'clock, with most of the company assembled in the East Room, ready to be received, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the Cabinet group made up their usual little parade proceeding from the State Dining Room into the Red Room, the host and hostess going on from there to the Blue Room where they received their guests.

Four Cabinet Members Are in 'Parade'

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the latter in blue and silver lame, were in the Cabinet contingent; also the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, she in white bengaline trimmed with a frothy white ruching around the neck and two narrow stripes of blue down the front; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who was gowned in pink and silver lame; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison, with Mrs. Edison, who wore a frock of grey crepe, set off with a muff of orchids.

Secretary and Mrs. Woodring, Mrs. Swanson and Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Edison came through the receiving line, leading the flock of other guests. The Assistant Secretary of War, Louis Johnson, was greeted next. Since his wife is ill, he was accompanied by his pretty daughter, Miss Lillian Johnson, who came down from New York where she attends the Finch School, especially to attend the reception, her first at the White House. One of the most attractive young ladies there, she wore a frock of cherry net over taffeta, with a hoop skirt and a fitted bodice.

The Marine Band, playing during the reception, seemed to specialize in lilting Viennese waltzes, which were quite in keeping with the gay atmosphere that permeated the gathering. Chatter rippling through the throng in the State Dining Room divided itself between greetings and comments such as—"Why the President called me by name!" . . . "I don't know a third of the people here." . . . "Of course everybody I know is in the Marine Corps." . . . "Did you ever see so many chic women?"

Very much a center of attention were the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Malin Craig, and Mrs. Craig, who held a court of their own in the Red Room. Mrs. Craig was gowned in rose lame, fashioned on straight lines with a slight train and trimmed with rose crystal clips at the neckline to match her earrings. Gen. and Mrs. Craig were accompanied by the former's aid, Maj. Carns Lee and Mrs. Lee.

The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy, had friends clustered around them all evening. Mrs. Leahy was a handsome figure in blue and silver brocade lame, made with a slight train. Diamond bracelets and a necklace to match were further accents for her attractive ensemble.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill were among the early arrivals, she wearing a frock of black crepe, trimmed with sequins. Still others noted during the first half of the reception were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John L. DeWitt, the latter gowned in silver lame, made on princess lines Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Julian L. Schley, she in white georgette studded with rhinestones; Maj. Gen. Albert H. Blanding and Mrs. Blanding, whose frock of blue velvet was worn with pearls and silver slippers; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Wallace DeWitt, she in blue lamb, and the Surgeon General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, who was accompanied by Mrs. Reynolds and their daughter, Miss Hebe Reynolds, who was lovely in a bouffant frock of green taffeta with gold accessories. Mrs. Reynolds was in black crepe, trimmed with long black fringe.

Gen. and Mrs. Williams Accompanied by Daughter

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams also were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Ray Williams, who wore a frock of pink and silver lame, made with a full skirt and puffed sleeves. Mrs. Williams was gowned in black crepe, trimmed with red roses on the bodice.

The Adjutant General, Maj. Gen. Emory S. Adams, was accompanied by Mrs. Adams, who wore a white silk jersey, made with a full circular skirt and short sleeves. The Quartermaster General and Mrs. Henry Gibbins were there, she wearing a frock of Dubonnet velvet. With them was their daughter, Miss Margaret Gibbins, who wore a bouffant gown of blue satin and net.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Fred W. Boschen were seen in the throng with their daughter, Miss Betty Boschen. Mrs. Boschen had chosen a gown of black lace and a corsage of red roses. Miss Boschen's frock of black lace with its rosepoint lace bertha and hoop skirt was especially becoming to her blonde hair and fair complexion.

Always popular additions to a party are the Judge Advocate General, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion and Mrs. Gullion. For last evening's event, the latter was gowned in blue net, made with a train and puffed sleeves and set off with an orchid corsage.

Members of Congress Noted in Crowd

Members of the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives made up an important group at the gathering. Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard and Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis were there. Senator Josh Lee was accompanied by Mrs. Lee, who was gowned in king's blue velvet, fashioned with a fitted bodice and a flaring skirt; and Senator Ernest Lundeen arrived with Mrs. Lundeen, who was trimly turned out in black velvet.

Representative Ewing Thomason was there with Mrs. Thomason who had chosen an especially becoming frock of wine velvet with a heart-shaped neckline; and Representative Andrew J. May, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the House, was there with Mrs. May; and Representative Ralph Church arrived with Mrs. Church, who was gowned in white satin.

Debutante Maisie Howard Among the Guests

Commander and Mrs. William Freseman came through the line early, Mrs. Freseman an attractive figure in a glittering white and crystal frock. Others seen shortly after they were greeted by President and Mrs. Roosevelt were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, the latter in fuschia and lavender chiffon, and their daughters, Miss Carol Fries and Mrs. Frederic Henney; Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, and their debutante daughter, Miss Maisie Howard, she in a bouffant frock of pink chiffon and taffeta, and Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, who were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Ann Wilkinson.

Others noted here and there were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ben Morreell, Mrs. Morreell wearing royal blue velvet with diamond brooch; Vice Admiral and Mrs. Harry M. P. Huse, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry Hough, Rear Admiral and Mrs. William R. Furlong, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Edward J. Marquart, Rear Admiral William G. DuBose, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold J. Bowen, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry Hough.

Scores of Notables Make Up Company

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Raymond F. Metcalfe, she in flowered lame and crepe brocade, were noticed circulating in the State dining room, as were Col. and Mrs. Wallace L. Clay, Capt. George W. Calver, U. S. N., and Mrs. Calver, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Richard H. Jordan, Col. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Hedrick, Col. and Mrs. Frank W. Young with their two daughters, Miss Martha R. Young and Miss Alma B. Young; Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Col. and Mrs. Oscar Griswold, with their daughter, Miss Matile Griswold.

Mrs. Alexander O. Surles, wearing eggshell brocade, was accompanying Col. Surles and in the East Room were seen Col. Stuart C. Godfrey, accompanied by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Andrew Underhill, of New York City; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Clayton B. Vogel and their two daughters, Miss Margaret B. Vogel and Miss Julia L. Vogel, Col. and Mrs. Wm. C. Harllee and their daughter, Miss Ella Harllee.

In the green room were Brigadier General and Mrs. John J. Kingman, Mrs. Kingman in turquoise chiffon sprinkled with rhinestones. They were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Jean Kingman, who wore salmon pink chiffon with the new decollette bodice. Also noticed were Admiral and Mrs. David Sellers, Major General and Mrs. Henry H. Arnold, Col. and Mrs. W. M. Robertson, she looking like a mermaid in a gown of iridescent sequins; Col. and Mrs. Haig Shekerjian, Col. J. W. N. Schulz, and Col. and Mrs. Paul X. English.

Also Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Walter Baker, Col. and Mrs. Robert L. Walsh, Rear Admiral and Mrs. James O. Richardson, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Russell B. Putnam, Col. and Mrs. Henry L. Larsen, Col. and Mrs. Clarence C. Harvey, Col. and Mrs. Laysen E. Atkins, Capt. and Mrs. Robert D. Workman, Capt. and Mrs. Cornelius P. Van Ness; and Capt. Glemore Ford Clark, U.S.N., and Mrs. Clarke, with their daughters, Virginia and Nancy.

Roosevelts Have Dinner

As is their custom before a state reception at the White House, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at dinner last night before greeting members of the Army and Navy corps at the annual party in their honor.

The guests last night were Representative Mary T. Norton, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George S. Messersmith, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. George Barnett, Miss Jane Brett, George T. Bye, Mrs. Roosevelt's literary agent, and Mrs. Bye; her lecture manager, Colston Leigh; Miss Mayris Chaney, Henry Osthagen, Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Young, Miss Marguerite LeHand, Miss Malvina C. Thompson, Capt. Hugh B. Waddell, Capt. Robert H. Williams and Lieut. Carlton R. Adams.

Dolly Corbin Feted at Party

Members of the younger set and younger married couples from the Diplomatic Corps gathered at the apartment of Miss Caroline Cecil at 2029 Connecticut avenue yesterday for a cocktail party in honor of Miss Dolly Corbin. The latter leaves soon to reside in New York with her parents, Col. and Mrs. Clifford Lee Corbin.

The hostess received her guests wearing a black silk afternoon dress, simply made, with a tucked bodice. The tea table was centered with a bowl of pink tulips.

Among the guests were the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Ghiraldo, the Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus, the Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Lucet, Miss Ruth Dove, Miss Eleanor Ryan, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Diana Rowland, Miss Peggy Townsend, William K. Ryan, Joao de Deus Ramos, and James Parks.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Entertain at Luncheon Today

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will entertain at luncheon at the White House today.

Yesterday, the First Lady was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State. The party took place at the Carlton Hotel.

The next in the series of luncheons being given for Mrs. Roosevelt by wives of Cabinet members will take place on Tuesday, when Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., will be hostess.

Greek Minister Honored at Dinner

Guests were the Counselor of the Greek Embassy and Mme. Depasta; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. Scudder Doeg, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Betty Beale, Miss Alice Dodge, Miss Evelyn Peyton Gordon, Kemper Simpson, B. Y. Martin, Albert Beasley and George Skouras, of New York City.

Finleys Entertain At Dinner for Mr. And Mrs. Miller

Mr. and Mrs. David Edward Finley entertained at dinner last night at their home in Georgetown for the newly arrived First Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Hoyer Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Leonide Ourusoff were also dinner hosts last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller were to have been honored at a luncheon yesterday by Jacques Dumaine, First Secretary of the French Embassy, but the host had to cancel the party as he is ill with influenza.

Mrs. Moran Entertains 20 At Luncheon

Mrs. H. D. Cooley Also Has Party at Congressional Club

Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., wife of the Maritime Commissioner, who formerly was a member of Congress, entertained 20 guests at luncheon yesterday at the Congressional Club. The long table at which the company was seated was decorated with roses, yellow acacia and blue sweet peas, arranged in a blue bowl.

Guests were Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Edward Burke, Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, Mrs. J. Buell Snyder, Mrs. Donald H. McLean, Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Mrs. Martin F. Smith, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, Mrs. Harry B. Coffee, Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mrs. Clyde Smith, Mrs. James C. Oliver, Mrs. Ernest Gruening and her house guest, Mrs. N. Raymond Clark, of Chicago, who left Washington yesterday afternoon, and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

Mrs. Harold D. Cooley also was a luncheon hostess at the Congressional Club yesterday. She had eight guests. There was still another party at the club, several members gathering for a non-hostess luncheon.

Ellises Hosts To Woodrings

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring were ranking guests at a dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis for Mr. and Mrs. Henry Haskell, of Kansas City. Mr. Haskell is editor of the Kansas City Star.

Other guests included Senator Chan Gurney, of South Dakota; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose and Miss Annette Rudolph.

The party took place in the Ellis home on Massachusetts avenue and later several guests, among them Secretary and Mrs. Woodring, went on to the Army-Navy reception at the White House.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

DUDLEY HARMON

NOT ALL visiting foreigners get around to repaying the hospitality that is lavished on them by Americans, but Lord and Lady Kemsley, of London, are notable exceptions. They were hosts at a cocktail party in their apartment at the Mayflower before leaving yesterday for New York, where they will be at the Waldorf before going on to Canada to visit the Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir.

Lord Kemsley is one of the most interesting of the many Britishers to come here this winter. Born plain James Berry, in the unpronounceable town of Gwaelodygarth, Merthyr Tydvil, Wales, he was one of three brothers who made names for themselves in the newspaper world. He is editor-in-chief of the London Times; another Berry, now Lord Camrose, owns the Daily Mail. The third, Lord Buckland, died several years ago.

PRESENT at Lord and Lady Kemsley's cocktail party were the Charge d'Affaires of the British Embassy, Victor Mallet; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, who entertained at luncheon for her hosts earlier in the week; Mrs. George Grant Mason, jr., and her house guest, Mrs. Brown Nast; Denys Smith, Washington correspondent for the Daily Telegraph; John Hammond and Senora de Zuberbuhler.

Also present were Pamela and Douglas Berry, two of Lord Kemsley's seven children. They gave a dinner that night in honor of Pendelton Hogan, the Washington author whose latest book, "Mortal, Be Proud," greatly interested Editor Lord Kemsley. Mr. Hogan was also a guest at the cocktail party.

ANOTHER departing visitor of title is Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, who returns today to New York. She will sail later for France, but says that this time it will not be another 20 years before she returns to her homeland. She plans to pay another visit to this country soon. Like one out of seemingly every three persons in Capital society at the moment, Baroness de Rothschild succumbed to the grippe earlier in the week.

STILL more people are cruise-minded. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson will sail February 11 on the Bremen for a 40-day jaunt around South America, the same cruise on which Clarence Hewes and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard are also going. Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies and her daughter, Emlen, embark tomorrow on the Normandie, Rio bound, with Angelica Lloyd as a fellow passenger. Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. Demarest Lloyd will go to New York to see them off.

WHEN a Senator's wife gives an "at home" without the accompaniment of half a dozen coat racks in the hall outside her apartment and several hundred guests milling about inside, it's definitely news. Yet just such a party was held yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Tydings. She had sent out cards to a few of her friends, just enough so that everybody had a chance to sit down and really converse intelligently.

The pretty blonde hostess wore a trailing black velvet tea gown with a diamond and emerald clip at the neck. She looked most decorative sitting on a sofa beside the fireplace of her drawing room, which has green brocade curtains, comfortable chairs upholstered in the same shade, and a white fur rug before the hearth. A vase of calla lilies was the only decoration.

Pouring tea were a group of her friends, including Mrs. William D. Byron and Mrs. William P. Cole, jr., wives of Maryland Representatives. Those who dropped in during the afternoon included Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mrs. David S. Barry, and one or two others.

Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Tydings, will return tomorrow from a trip to Europe.

Sen. and Mrs. Hughes Entertain For Justices Black and Reed

Justice and Mrs. Hugo L. Black and Justice and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed were the guests in whose honor Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes entertained at dinner last evening in the Mayflower. The Chinese room was the scene of the party. Spring flowers were used for table decorations.

The company included the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Povilas Zadeikis, Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Senator Kenneth McKellar, Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George, Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Senator Tom Connally, Senator John G. Townsend, jr, Senator Richard B. Russell, Senator John H. Overton.

Also, Senator nad Mrs. Carl A. Hatch, Senator and Mrs. James E. Murray, Senator Joseph F. Guffey and Miss Ida Guffey, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator and Mrs. Prentiss Brown, Senator and Mrs. Edwin C. Johnson, Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Senator John E. Miller, Senator and Mrs. Scott W. Lucas.

Still others there were the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Union and Mme. Oumansky, Mr. and Mrs. T. Kinsey Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Marie Snyder, sister of Mrs. Pepper; Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Judge and Mrs John Biggs, Dr. and Mrs. Carl H. Davis, Mrs. Neitah King and Mrs. James H. Hughes, jr., of Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. John P. Martin, of Camden, Del.

Daughters Of House Name Heads

Miss Frances Boykin Chosen President Of Organization Formed Last Year

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Miss Frances Boykin, daughter of Representative Frank Boykin, of Alabama, yesterday was elected president of the Daughters of the House, a club formed last year by the daughters, daughters-in-law and nieces of members of the House of Representatives. The first meeting of the season was held yesterday at the home of Miss Patricia Houston, daughter of Representative John Houston, of Kansas.

Miss Houston, who was elected treasurer of the organization, is a student at Woodrow Wilson High School and the youngest of its members. Other officers include Miss Bonnie Patton, daughter of Representative Nat Patton, of Texas, first vice president and chairman of the entertainment committee; Miss Dorothy Ramspeck, daughter of Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, second vice president; Miss Dorothy Smith, niece of Representative Albert E. Carter, of California, third vice president; Miss Fanchon Aldrich, niece of Representative Jesse Wolcott, of Michigan, fourth vice president; Miss Mary Maud Moss, niece of Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, secretary.

Following the business meeting, Miss Houston, assisted by her mother, entertained the club members at tea. They were served in the dining room where a centerpiece of pink gladiolas and carnations and pink candles in silver candelabra decorated the table.

Variety of Activities On Club Program

The girls expect to have fortnightly meetings and to include swimming, bicycling, skating and social affairs in their program this year as they did last. No definite program was outlined, but they also discussed adding social welfare work to their activities.

Several of the members, like Miss Houston, are busy with school work and others have jobs. The Misses Miriam and Marjorie Smith, twin nieces of Representative Carter, attend George Washington University, while their sister, Dorothy, is in her uncle's office. Miss Ramspeck is studying in the theater department of the King-Smith School; Miss Charlotte King, daughter of the delegate from Hawaii, is in her father's office, and two members of the group are lawyers, Miss Wilma Martin, niece of Representative Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, who also has a Government position.

Other Daughters And Nieces Present

Others who attended the meeting yesterday were: Mrs. John Tolan, daughter-in-law of Representative Tolan of California; Miss Betty Jensen, daughter of Representative Ben F. Jensen, of Iowa; Miss Mary Jane Rabaut, daughter of Representative Louis C. Rabaut, of Michigan; the Misses Virginia and Katherine Garrett, daughters of Representative Clyde Garrett, of Texas; Miss Catherine Craig and Miss Marjorie Griswold, nieces of former Representative Glenn Griswold, of Indiana; Mrs. James Hugh Nelson, daughter of Representative Sam Massingale, of Oklahoma; Miss Margaret Engle, daughter of Representative Albert J. REPRESENTATIVES of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers and other interested groups have been invited to visit the dental clinic at Children's Hospital this afternoon at 4 o'clock to see the work which is being done there. Principals or parent-teacher presidents from the five high schools will attend and present contributions to defray the cost of materials used. Dr. William Cassady and Dr. Montague Cashman volunteer their services on alternate Fridays.

The clinic was started last July for high school students as they are not included in the dental demonstration project of the P.-T. A., which includes younger children, nor do they come within the age limit of those who may attend the regular Children's Hospital clinic. The hospital, Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of the schools, and Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, of the Department of Health, have co-operated in the project, which is under the supervision of the D. C. Dental Society.

MRS. WALTER B. FRY, president of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, thought she was attending a Founders' Day observance of the two Langley P.-T. A.'s last night—and she was but she found the occasion was also a celebration of her own birthday, cake and all. She was presented with a silver vase and was altogether surprised by the part of the party which was in her honor.

Mrs. T. A. Martin is the Langley P.-T. A. president and Mrs. Ehrhard, president of the Langley School for Crippled Children's group.

Miss Mary Twitchell was speaker at the meeting and Mrs. W. R. Cook, soloist, accompanied by Mrs. L. Vincelette.

MISS MILDRED DEAN, president of the Classical Society, who spent last summer in Greece, described her trip Wednesday night at a meeting of the Greece-America Society, held at the Y. W. C. A. Miss Anne Darlington, the president, was in charge.

THE KANSAS STATE SOCIETY tonight will have its annual dinner dance in the National Press Building, with the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring heading the list of honor guests. Others will be Federal Trade Commissioner William Ayers, Commissioner of Internal Revenue and Mrs. Guy T. Helvering, John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and all members of the Congressional delegation and their wives.

KAPPA DELTA SORORITY will have a benefit bridge tonight at the student club of George Washington University, Twenty-first and G streets at 8:30.

KING PAN CHEW, noted Chinese dancer is presenting the first of two dance recitals tonight at the Y. W. C. A., sponsored by the Chinese Women's Association for the benefit of China Relief fund.

THE WASHINGTON ALUMNAE of Cedar Crest College will meet at the home of Mrs. Sterling P. Eagleston, 3522 S street tonight at 8. Mrs. I. C. Blickenstaff is president of the local alumnae.

20th Century Club Indorses Welfare Aims

Recommendations Of Women Voters League Supported

The Twentieth Century Club voted yesterday morning to support the League of Women Voters' recommendations for a more adequate child welfare program for the District, and to send a representative to the hearings before the Senate and House committees on appropriations.

The resolution indorsing the league's recommendations was presented by Mrs. Basil Manly, chairman of legislation, at the business meeting held in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery, the club president, presided. Other resolutions were adopted opposing the Patman chain store bill; favoring the Neely bill prohibiting block booking and blind selling of motion picture films, and urging appropriations for the proposed library building.

Dr. R. D. W. Conor, archivist of the United States, spoke, and both he and Mrs. Connor were guests of honor at the luncheon following.

The recent statement that the National Archives were a mausoleum for dead documents was refuted by Dr. Connor. The records there are by no means "dead," he said, but documents which are the foundations of our Government, records of our independence and of international relations.

Destruction of the archives would cause confusion and chaos not only in the Government but among the citizens of the country, said Dr. Connor. He listed the various fields they covered as land grants, patents, scientific papers, historical and cultural records and 600 tons of film records, including those taken in the Antarctic by Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Great use of the documents is being made by private citizens interested in research, he said. During the past year more than 5,000 requests for information came by mail.

The club yesterday welcomed three new members at its meeting Mrs. Leason H. Adams, Mrs. O. A. Mechlin and Mrs. Richard Peale Herrick.

Bertha Chaney G. O. P. Chief

Mrs. Bertha Shanks Chaney was elected president of the Woman's Republican Club of Montgomery County yesterday afternoon to succeed Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, of Bethesda, who has served as acting president during the absence of Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, past president. Mrs. Tuckerman was elected one of the three new directors.

The meeting, at which members of the Takoma Park Woman's Republican Club were hostesses, was held at Mrs. Chaney's home there. The business included plans for a membership drive. The club meets quarterly.

Other new officers include Miss Olive Kinsman, of Burnt Mills, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas Kelley, of Darnestown, second vice president; Mrs. Frank Rusk, of Kensington, third vice president; Mrs. Millward Taft, of Takoma Park, fourth vice president; Mrs. Herbert M. Rockwell, Silver Spring, recording secretary; Mrs. David A. Snyder, of Chevy Chase, treasurer; Mrs. Merton English, of Aspen Hills, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth A. Getzendanner, of Chevy Chase; Mrs. J. Reed Bradley, of Bethesda, and Mrs. Tuckerman, directors.

D.A.R. Board Visits Home of Betty Lewis

Trip to Kenmore Highlights Busy Day For Various Groups

A visit to Kenmore, home of Betty Washington Lewis in Fredericksburg, Va., yesterday afternoon, by members of the National board of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the dinner of the junior members of the D. C. chapters at the Y. W. C. A. and the card party sponsored by the Chapter House Corporation at the Willard Hotel last night, made a full program of D. A. R. activities for District members and officers.

Among those at the Juniors' dinner who had hurried back from Kenmore to attend were: Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general; Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, organizing secretary-general; Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general; Mrs. William H. Pouch, president of the National Society, C. A. R., and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, D. C. state regent. All were guests of honor as was Mrs. Roger Williams, registrar of the District D. A. R. Mrs. Donald M. Earll, chairman of the junior group, presided.

Arrangements for the luncheon at Kenmore, attended by national officers and State regents who had been here for the meeting of the national board, were made by Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, State regent of Virginia.

The card party at the Willard was for the benefit of the chapter house fund.

Mrs. Harry C. Grove, president of the Chapter House Corporation, was assisted by Mrs. Ralph M. Griswold, chairman of the committee; Mrs. Gertrude W. Moser; Mrs. Thomas Seay, Miss Phebe Stine, Mrs. Jason Waterman, Mrs. Harry B. Gauss, Mrs. W. B. Douglass, Mrs. Grant F. Chase, Mrs. Edwin J. Ryan, Mrs. William T. Clerk, Mrs. A. Y. Casanova and Mrs. Edward L. Morrison.

Congressional Club To Hear Mr. Weddell

Alexander W. Weddell, American Ambassador to Argentina, will speak this afternoon at the Congressional Club. The ambassador, who has held posts in Denmark, Mexico, and Zanzibar, will have as his subject "Diplomatic Experiences."

At the tea following the address, Mrs. William H. Larrabee, wife of Representative Larrabee, of Indiana; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, of Maine; Mrs. Karl Stefan, wife of Representative Stefan, of Nebraska, and Mrs. Ralph E. Church, wife of Representative Church, of Illinois, will assist.

Lewis Report Called 'Biased' By 3 Leaders

Welfare Chiefs Hold Need for More Funds Has Been 'Beclouded'

Denouncing the report of Burdette G. Lewis on the District relief administration as "biased and confused," three Washington welfare leaders last night called attention to "main issues beclouded by the report"—the asserted need for large budget and personnel increases.

The Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the Social Welfare Department of the Federation of Churches; Morris Klass, director of the Jewish Social Service Agencies, and Willam H. Savin, director of the Family Service Association, urged more than 200 members of the Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church to appeal for increased funds before the coming Congressional hearings.

Describing the report as lacking in objectivity, the Rev. Mr. Mixon criticized Lewis for failing to offer constructive criticism but instead attacking the system in the manner of a "public prosecutor." He said some of the wage ceilings suggested by Lewis are lower than those required by minimum wage laws.

Pointing to the necessity for budget and personnel increases in District welfare agencies — with workers handling three times the number of cases they can treat efficiently—Klass urged church groups to co-operate in "calling attention to the human values involved."

Savin approved the recommendation of Lewis for co-ordination of existing welfare divisions but declared the charge of "chiseling" emphasized the need for personnel increases.

Driver Sentenced To 5 Months in Death of Boy, 12

Walter Jackson, colored, 27, of 624 B street southeast, was convicted of negligent homicide and sentenced to five months in jail yesterday in the traffic death last July of 12-year-old David Mockabee. Jackson had been indicted for manslaughter.

In sentencing Jackson, Justice Proctor credited him with six months served since the accident. According to testimony, the boy was killed in the 2600 block of L street southeast when Jackson's automobile, traveling at high speed, crushed him against a truck.

Frank Keeley, 46, 1020 Upshur street northeast, was critically injured when struck by an auto at Twelfth and Michigan avenue northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for compound fracture of the skull, compound leg fracture, and possible internal injuries.

Anthony Buchanowski, a soldier attached to Walter Reed Hospital, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital of injuries received when his automobile skidded and overturned on Chain Bridge road near McLean, Va. His companion, Paul W. Mann, 22, also attached to Walter Reed, suffered minor injuries.

Guy E. Unger, of 938 I street northwest, a watchman, was seriously injured near Frederick, Md., when his automobile was in a collision. Unger was said to have a fractured jaw and internal injuries.

JOHN CLAGETT PROCTOR

Capital's Historian at 71 Is 'Just Getting Warmed Up'

He Makes His Living From the Past, But His Existence Is Very Much of The Present, With Writing and Dancing

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really lots of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross

For one who makes his living out of the past, John Clagett Proctor is quaffing liberally from the cup of the present and has both eyes wide open for whatever the future may hold.

Washington's No. 1 historian, he is working harder at the age of 71 than ever before, writing a weekly newspaper article, editing the organ of the Association of Retired Federal Employes, chronicling for the Order of Eastern Star, Association of Oldest Inhabitants and the Columbia Historical Society and performing a myriad of other duties.

"I'm just getting warmed up," says Mr. Proctor, whose working den in his home, at 1605 Jonquil street northwest, is a maze of filing cabinets, books, scrap books and souvenirs of early Washington.

He begrudgingly admitted having attended a dance the previous night, quickly adding that he had made up the time lost from his work.

"You may be sure I wouldn't have gone dancing," he said, "if my copy for next Sunday's paper had not already been sent to the Star. The deadline is Tuesday, which may seem pretty early, but I seldom miss it."

Mr. Proctor was born in the National Capital, on November 15, 1867, the son of a prominent newspaper editor. He was graduated in law from National University and admitted to the bar, but never went into practice. Instead, he went to work for the Smithsonian Institution as a printer and spent 47 years in that branch of the Government service.

In 1928 he began contributing historical articles to the Star and has been writing them ever since. Three years later he retired from the Smithsonian, but the volume of his work did not diminish. To the contrary, it increased until today he feels it has just about reached the saturation point.

"But that doesn't mean, understand, that I have any plans to cut down," he said. "True, I'm sometimes at my desk until 2 a. m., but that isn't often. While I don't intend to take on any more work, nothing is further from my mind than giving up any of my present activities."

Each of his Sunday articles requires five days of research, writing and revising, he said. He obtains most of his material in libraries, driving his car from one to another. He has never been without a driver's license since 1914.

He has been to Europe twice and South America once. His latest travel plans are for a trip to California with Mrs. Proctor next year. It isn't that he thinks he needs a rest, but that a good, long vacation amid different scenery will send him back to Washington full of fresh vigor and incentive for his work.

"I'm trying to talk my wife into going to Hawaii from California," he said.

Eastern High Graduates Class of 178

Democracy in the United States depends on the loyalty of American youth to the ideals which motivate activities of schools, churches and courts, Paul J. Sedgwick, attorney, told 178 February graduates of Eastern High School last night.

He stressed the importance of liberal education and active participation in civic affairs if basic American institutions are to be preserved.

Mrs. Ruth O. Deming, chairman of the honors committee, announced the award of first graduation honors to Rosalie Gertrude Dekelbaum; Frances Wertlieb and Norman Nathan Wertlieb. Second graduation honors were awarded to Ruth Bordow, Frances Sarah Cox, Celia Chaya Goldsman, Evelyn Bernadine Lewis, Nellie Menick, Lillian Agnes Rocha, Meldred Elizabeth Steadman, Margaret Tolson, Melvin Weaver Carrico, John Michael Doukas and Charles Edward Jones.

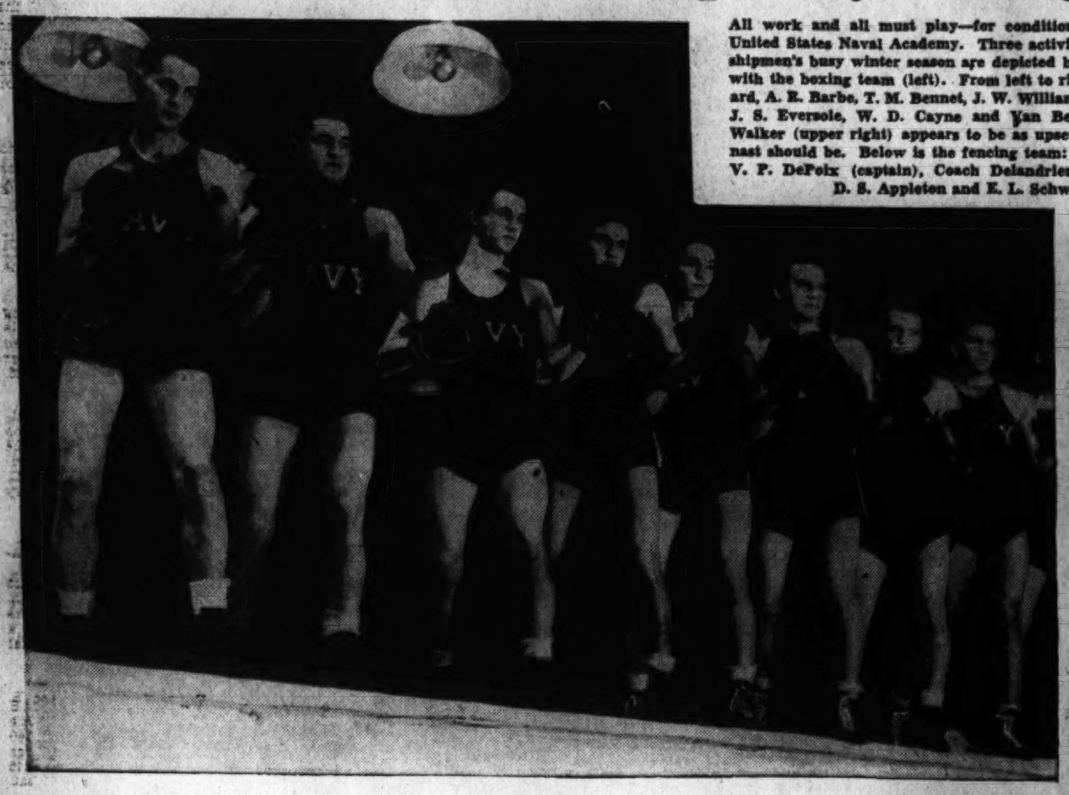
MAX SCHMELING DENIES NAZI TROUBLE

Navy Athletes Keep Busy During Winter Months



All work and all must play—for condition's sake, at the United States Naval Academy. Three activities of the Midshipmen's busy winter season are depicted below, beginning with the boxing team (left). From left to right: J. E. Shepard, A. E. Barbe, T. M. Bennet, J. W. Williams, J. P. Marion, J. S. Eversole, W. D. Cayne and Van Benham. Warren Walker (upper right) appears to be as upset as a good gymnast should be. Below is the fencing team: D. F. Taugher, V. P. DePeix (captain), Coach Delandrier, J. W. Henry, D. S. Appleton and E. Schmeling Arrives For 'Friendly' Visit

Former Champion Denies Any Trouble With Nazi Heads

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—Max Schmeling came back to the United States today ostensibly for a ten-day visit, but still considerably pleased at the prospect of picking up a good American dollar or two for a prize fight appearance.

As cagy as a 'possum, the former world heavyweight champion parried questions concerning his rumored trouble with Nazi authorities, denying everything, and, in spots, countering question with question. When it was over, one and all agreed Max missed his calling—he should have been a diplomat.

Max, however, is definitely not a politician. He flatly stated as much when he was asked any question even faintly concerning politics. Under this head, he classed such queries as whether he had ever threatened to "break Propaganda Minister Goebbels' neck" if the latter should pay attention to Mrs. Schmeling, or whether Goebbels had been beaten up by friends of Actress Lydia Baarova.

"All Bunk," Says Max

"All bunk, absolutely silly," he declared. "You reporters are funny. Why do you ask me these things; I'm no politician. Ask a politician. Why didn't you ask the German Ambassador?"

His beetled black brows lifted slightly when he was informed the German Ambassador had departed these shores some time ago.

"Why did I come over on a French boat (the Normandie)?" he repeated a question. "Well, why not? I've crossed the ocean 20 times. Last time it was on an English boat."

That the purpose of the current trip wasn't exactly a joy ride came out very early in the interview. First Max asserted flatly that he had not been sent to this country by the German government to quiet rumors that all was not well between the Schmelings and Nazi leaders.

Here to Say "Hello"

"I came over," he added, "for 8 or 10 or 14 days to say 'hello' to my friends and pay a little visit. I have not been in a concentration camp, and I have not been detained or questioned by Nazi authorities. Only six weeks ago I was at a dinner which Goebbels also attended.

"I will fight again if I have the chance to meet some leading heavyweights. I want to fight Joe Louis again; I think I can beat him. I don't want to quit the ring with a defeat."

'National Baseball Day' Is Proposed By Rep. Shanley

Representative Shanley (Democrat), Connecticut, proposed yesterday that next June 12, the one-hundredth anniversary of baseball, be proclaimed as "national baseball be proclaimed as "National Baseball Day." He said:

"Baseball is America's game, American in origin, American in spirit and American in its appeal to the fans. It has perhaps contributed more than any other activity to the development of the American temperament, being the Nation's safety valve and its insurance against excesses of nations abroad," he told the Associated Press.

G. W. Eleven And Generals Meet in 1940

Home-and-Home Series Is Arranged; Second Game Slated Here

George Washington University has renewed athletic relations with Washington and Lee University in all sports and will meet the Generals in football in 1940 and '41, Athletic Director Max Farrington announced yesterday.

The Colonial eleven will visit Lexington, Va., on October 12, 1940, and will be host to the Generals here on October 11, 1941.

This will be the first meeting in football between these schools since 1932, when George Washington was victorious, 18-0, in a game played at Lexington. Their teams have met spasmodically in other sports, but now they will compete regularly in football, basketball, baseball and tennis, and possibly in freshman athletics.

The first game in the new basketball series was played last week at Lexington, George Washington winning, 51 to 41. Next year's basketball game will be played here.

The renewal of relations with Washington and Lee is another step in the university's policy of competing against more nearby institutions, rather than the former policy of playing an almost completely intersectional football schedule.

George Washington's 1940 schedule is nearly completed. In addition to Washington and Lee, five opponents who appear on this year's card will be carried over to the next season. These teams are Georetown, West Virginia, Kansas, Clemson and Bucknell.

Short Course Topic For Greenskeepers

A general discussion of the recent short course at Maryland University will feature the February meeting of the Mid-Atlantic Association of Greenskeepers Monday night at the Southern Hotel, Baltimore.

Dinner at 6 will preced the business meeting at 7:30. The golf tourneys will not start until the March meeting.

Baseball Golf Tourney Paced By Paul Waner

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 2 (AP).—Smooth-stroking Paul Waner, Pittsburgh's hard-hitting outfielder, paced the field by five strokes today to take the medal in the professional baseball player's golf tournament.

Waner vs. Garland Braxton, Little Rock; Cullenbine vs. Joe Medwick, St. Louis Cardinals; Walker vs. Tommy Bridges, Detroit; Paul Derringer, Cincinnati, vs. Heinie Manush, Pittsburgh; Clark vs. Rick Ferrell, Washington; Lloyd Brown, St. Paul, vs. Truett Seawell, Pittsburgh; Wes Ferrell vs. Nick Altrock, Washington, and Jack Russell, Chicago Cubs, vs. Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox.

Fighter Organizes Own Picket Line Demanding Justice

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—The bantamweight boxing situation took a new turn today when Challenger "Kayo" Morgan of Detroit organized a private picket line in an attempt to get that blindfolded lady known as Justice to tip her scales in his direction.

"Kayo" Morgan on picket line

Cauliflower alley has seen many strange sights but none equaling that when Morgan, in checkered overcoat, derby hat, cane and smoking a cigar, pulled up in front of Mike Jacobs' Hippodrome with his manager and four friends to start their long march to nowhere through the snow and rain.

Jacobs has nothing to do with the current crisis which is an international affair that extends from Detroit to Puerto Rico and involves such points as 12½ and 37½ per cent, round-trip boat tickets, half-million-dollar stadiums, and hot and cold weather.

But Morgan, who seeks a return match with Champion Sixto Escobar of Puerto Rico, said he picked the Hippodrome because "that's the boxing capital of America and we oughta get some justice around here."

Patty Berg Winner In Opening Round

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 2 (U.P.).—National Champion Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, opened her drive toward a fourth successive Miami Biltmore women's golf title today with an 8-and-7 win over Mrs. A. H. Rachlin, of Maplewood, N. J.

Nineteen-year-old Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, who won medal honors with a record-equalling round of 79, also had an easy time, defeating Mrs. John Arends, Miami, 5 and 4.

O'Toole Pins Little Wolf in 24 Minutes

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Shamus O'Toole, a broth of a boy who has a refreshing brogue and a large following among Washington wrestling fans, earned another shot at Jim Londos' championship crown last night by tossing Chief Little Wolfe in the feature bout at the Arena before a near-capacity audience.

It took Shamus exactly 24½ minutes to bump the beefy Redskin to the carpet and hold his heaving carcas while that eminent mathematician, Dr. Cyclone Burns, tolled three over his prostrate form. But before they reached that dramatic climax Shamus had his troubles—not to mention the good Dr. Burns, who was twice drawn into the melee.

Evidently out for no good, Little Wolfe insisted on squeezing Shamus' windpipe to strengthen his wrist muscles. This met with the approval of neither O'Toole nor Burns, although the latter suffered no ill effect until he tried to pry the combatants apart. Little Wolfe tripped the arbiter, slapped him on his bald pate and otherwise maltreated him. Burns was ready to disqualify him, but throught better of it and decided to let Shamus polish him off.

O'Toole finally got around to giving the Indian the works, despite a bandaged right hand. The hand was damaged last week, it is reliably reported, when Shamus reached for a second helping of chicken at his boarding house. When the young Celt started work in earnest Little Wolfe had less chance than a pedestrian in the 4:30 o'clock traffic jam. Four times he put the Indian on his back before Burns was able to complete a count.

Joe Savoldi won the semi-final from Nick Campofreda, pinning the former Western Maryland grid star after flooring him with a series of Kangeroo kicks. Campofreda twice had Savoldi on the deck with body presses, but Burns, who also refereed this match, gave the retired Notre Dame fotball star a long count, and Savoldi managed to extricate himself from the difficult situations.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

By Lewis F. Atchison.

There is much more behind the rumored Joe Louis-Tony Galento heavyweight championship bout than has been written, or will be printed, but there seems to be an affinity between Promoter Mike Jacobs, Joe Jacobs, the pudgy pugilist's pilot, and Promoter Herman Taylor, of Philadelphia, worth airing. It all goes back to Galento's scheduled bout with John Henry Lewis, which was canceled last month when obese Anthony took sick with pneumonia.

ATCHISON.

After making the Galento-Lewis match, so the story goes, Mr. Taylor received a communication from Mr. Jacobs, the promoter, asking him if he had any good reason for getting Signor Galento bumped off for an insignificant $25,000 gate in Philadelphia, when Jacobs could get a more thorough job done on Tony outdoors at Yankee Stadium with a couple of hundred grand in the till. Mr. Jacobs, furthermore, pointed out that Taylor could earn some serious sugar by co-operating in the promotion of the outdoor bout. Mr. Galento's opponent for the occasion, of course, would be a taffy-colored boy who spelled his name L-O-U-I-S, and who was a guaranteed, sure-fire attraction at the ticket office.

Mr. Taylor, a noted mathmatician when it comes to adding up box-office figures, was visibly impressed by his contemporary's weighty argument, and was trying to locate a loop-hole in Galento's or Lewis' papers that would permit him to cancel the bout. Mr. Taylor's lawyer, however, had made the terms iron-clad, and had even manacled Taylor to the agreement with terse phrases. Mr. Taylor was on the verge of arranging a broken arm or ankle for Tony—since the Lewis party refused to withdraw from the contract, even for a consideration, when Galento caught cold, took to sneezing, and finally took to his bed. It was pneumonia, the medicos agreed, although some of Tony's unsympathetic friends rashly called the whole thing a frame-up—or so to speak. They said Tony was hiding out in a hospital to prevent John Henry from outpointing him in the ten-round match, which had been canceled at Tony's first shudder. But if Tony was hiding out they went to a lot of trouble to keep him hors d' combat.

Galento proudly points to a spot on his arm where a physician tattooed his initials with a hypodermic needle. They gave him a blood transfusion every night for a week, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, and almost had to resort to the ice-box treatment to coax down his temperature. Tony survived both pneumonia and the treatment, while his same unsympathetic friends clucked their tongues and insisted something was wrong.

Taylor's bank roll, meanwhile, had decreased some $15,000 due to preliminary expenses incurred in promoting the canceled bout with Louis, but felt neither pain nor sorrow. He was supposed to be reimbursed by Promoter Jacobs—at the expense of Joe Louis, when the champion fought again. Ironically enough, this sum was supposedly raised through the Lewis-Louis meeting, which was little more than a meeting.

Regardless of the veracity of those rumors, if a Galento-Louis bout is on the calendar, it will culminate one of the greatest build-ups in modern ring history. Primo Carnera's rise and fall tops them all, of course, but ponderous Primo had the benefit of a little high pressure "salesmanship" that hardly could be denied with safety. Galento, however, has risen to the top through pure, unadulterated publicity—plus the usual quota of tank jobs. Photos of Tony gurgling beer, testing his wind with long, black cheroots, and dining out in full dress, struck the public's fancy. Whether you laughed or scoffed your curiosity was disturbed, at least, from its lethargy. Tony also took to referring to everybody as a "bum," adding that he could "konk 'im in a round wit' de left." His list of bums included J. Louis, who hardly seems to come within that category. But Tony bravely referred to him as a "big bum." He may be wrong, and may pay bitterly for those words, but you'll also pay for the privilege of personally witnessing the test of their truthfullness. And that is exactly what Tony hopes. Right or wrong, if he can arouse the public's curiosity sufficiently to lay its hard earned cash on the line to see him in action, his lines will be well spoken.

If Tony should polish off Joe, accidentally or by sheer science, Mr. Jacobs will have to add another desk to his office for the personal use of Mr. Taylor, who will move in as joint-owner of Galento's contract. Jacobs has the copyright on Louis' athletic endeavors for five years, and Taylor has Galento's signature on a similar document; but Jacobs takes the necessry precaution, when signing every Louis opponent, to guard against his operation of the heavyweight title. He stipulates the winner must work for him five years. To get Tony's name on such a paper required the consent of Mr. Taylor, who leans toward a partnership, rather than outright agreement.

Again, if Tony happens to whip Louis, the National Boxing Association ratings committee promptly will sue every newspaper in the United States for slandering its selection of Galento as the No. 1 challenger. And if the burly bartender goes out in the firht round—as he will, the ratings committee can go bag its collective head.

Helen Dettweiler Defeats Betty Myers In Tourney Finals

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 2.—Helen Dettweiler, Maryland State champion, from the Congressional Country Club, near Washington, D. C., won the annual Belleair Women's Invitation Tournament here today over Betty Myers, Clearwater, Fla., by a 3 and 2 margin.

The finalists reached the turn in 41 each and were all even but Miss Dettweiler lost little time on the back nine, winning three of the first four holes and closing the match on the sixteenth green.

The girls halved the first hole in fives and Miss Myers went one up by dropping a 60-foot approach shot on the second hole. The Clearwater player dropped a 20-foot birdie putt on the fifth for a two-hole advantage, but the former District Champion cut the lead to one with a par on the sixth. They halved through the eighth and Miss Dettweiler evened the match at the turn with a regulation par.

The eventual winner played a difficult shot over the Palmetto's to go one up on the tenth, increased the margin on the eleventh with a perfect approach shot, and went three up on the thirteenth by downing a 25 footer. Miss Myers won the fourteenth to stay in the match, but after halving the fifteenth Miss Dettweiler settled the issue on the next hole by knocking a six-iron shot within 3 feet of the pin while Miss Myers was short.

Gallaudet Meets Wilson Teachers

Coach Blair Smith announced his team is in top shape and ready to give the Teachers a real battle. New plays have been worked out and the Blues will spring something new on their rivals.

New Sandlot Body Formed; Gauzza Elected

Control of amateur baseball hereabouts was vested in the men who have had the dust of the sandlot diamonds on their shoes for years when the presidents of five of the six local leagues voted to withdraw from the National Capital Baseball Federation at a meeting held last night. Announcing that they believed they could best conduct their own affairs, the league leaders formed their own governing body, The District of Columbia Baseball Association.

"Vic" Gauzza, president of the Departmental and Commercial week-day leagues and also "Judge Landis" of the four divisions of the National City League playing Sunday games, was elected active president of the new group. Other officers elected were: George D. Riley, honorary president; R. D. Yates, vice-president; Mike Sklar, 2nd vice-president; W. P. Griffith, secretary and Bill Flester, treasurer.

Conover a Director

A board of directors was named numbering one active representative of each league. In the group are: Edward J. Conover, Departmental League; Lieut. Balanger, Militia League; Chris Heruich, Jr., Industrial League; A. J. Brosseau, Government League and George I. James, Commercial League.

"We believe the move is in the best interests of our leagues," said President Gauzza last night." After all, our men are those in constant contact with managers, players and officials and best know local conditions. We feel that we should have the full say as to how our leagues are conducted."

The new set-up will control some 40 week-day teams and before the season begins approximately the same number of Sunday clubs will be in the parent body.

Mistaken Mutuel Seller Is Awfully Happy Man

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2 (U.P.).—J. R. Brain, seller of $10 mutuel tickets at Hialeah Park, issued a customer the wrong ticket in the seventh race today and had to buy it himself. The ticket was on the nose of Fleet Step. The horse won and paid $196.60 for a $2 ticket, largest price of the meeting. Brain collected $983.

'Sarazen's Out of Bounds'—Cotton

Silly Season Opens With Gene's Insults, British Pro Claims

By the Associated Press.

Glasgow, Feb. 2.—Henry Cotton, answering Gene Sarazen's criticism of British golf pros in general and Cotton in particular, today accused Sarazen of ridiculing British professionals to publicize himself and remarked, "Gene is out of bounds again."

Criticized by Sarazen yesterday for claiming to be the best golfer in the world and then demanding a guarantee before going to the United States to prove it, Cotton said:

"You can always tell when the American silly season arrives. Sarazen starts it off by insulting somebody. I don't even hold a major title now and never claimed to be the best golfer in the world."

"Ten years ago," he said, "leading American professionals were free lancers. They played in the British Open because they knew the British title was worth more to them financially than any other.

HENRY COTTON

Former British Open Champ Would Come To U. S. for $10,000

"Today I don't rely for my living on winning championships. I have definite year-round commitments and the only reason I demanded $10,000 for a two-month trip to the United States was because I would have to make that much to pay my expenses and duplicate my earnings on the side."

Cotton has been making around $1,000 a week this winter on a vaudeville circuit. In addition he just signed a $10,000 contract for representing a golf goods manufacturing firm this year. He also has signed a four-year contract as pro with the Ashridge Club at a substantial increase in salary.

Outside of Sam Snead there probably is no professional in the world who is making anything like Cotton's annual salary.

Maryland Gives Duke Worst Home Defeat in History, 60-44

Devils Small Competition For Terps

DeWitt, Bengoechea, Johnson Score 48 Points in Rout on Carolina Floor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Durham, N. C., Feb. 2.—Putting on a dazzling exhibition of point-getting wizardy, the University of Maryland's fast-breaking Terps drubbed Duke's Blue Devils of basketball, 60 to 44, in the Duke gymnasium here tonight. It was the worst defeat a Duke court team has ever suffered on its home floor.

Maryland was hot tonight. The Old Liners just couldn't miss. George Dewitt, Adam Bengoechea and Eddie Johnson rang in 48 points between them and played enough fine basketball to beat the Blue Devils all by themselves. Dewitt had 18 points. Bangoechea threw in 16 and Johnson scored 14.

Sixteen Out of 25

In the final half, Maryland fired 25 shots and counted on 16 of them—an average which Coach Eddie Cameron of Duke said after the game was the highest he had ever seen.

Leading off with their sophomore "shock troops," the Blue Devils grabbed an early lead and were out in front at 15-10 midway the first half. But then the Terps started to move. They grabbed the lead at 23-17 with 3½ minutes left in the first half, and after that never relinquished their margin.

Maryland led, 26-22, at intermission, and shortly after the second half opened Duke pulled up to within two points of the Terps at 26-24. But that was a close as the Blue Devils could come.

Bob Omara, Duke forward, provided the only solace for Duke. He tossed in 6 field goals and 2 free throws for 14 points, to lead the Duke scoring column. The summary:

Galento to Battle Natie Brown at Detroit Tonight

Detroit, Feb. 2 (AP).—Tony Galento, the Newark boxer and tavern keeper, will carry his campaign for a chance at the heavyweight title into the champion's home town tomorrow night when he meets Natie Brown, Washington veteran, at Olympia Stadium in a 10-round match.

BROWN

Twice before the two have met. Brown won a decision the first time, but in a return match Galento flattened him in the first round. Two-ton Tony will enter the ring a favorite this time.

Galento is reported to be angling for a meeting with Champion Joe Louis in the spring. Brown stayed 10 rounds with the Brown Bomber in 1935 but was dropped in 4 in their second match.

Nat Rookies Sitting Down on Training Job

Nats' Manager Hurts Back and Retires to Hotel at Orlando

By the Associated Press.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 2.—Bucky Harris, manager of the Washington Senators, opened active spring training for his corps of rookies here today and became the first casualty of the season.

The former "boy wonder" of baseball hurt his back. He didn't stop to explain how it happened, but merely said "I'm going back to the hotel and go to bed."

Averill Deal Spurned

Delray Beach, Fla., Feb. 2 (AP).—C. C. Slapnicka, vice president of the Cleveland Indiaps, said today Cleveland Indians, said today Cleveland had rejected a Detroit Tigers' offer for Outfielder Earl Averill.

Slapnicka said he discussed several proposals with Walter O. Briggs, Tigers' owner, but none was satisfactory.

While Slapnicka declined to name the players offered by Detroit, it was believed Billy Rogell, shortstop, was a key man in the discussion.

Joe Marty Signs

Chicago, Feb. 2 (AP).—The signed contract of Outfielder Joe Marty was received at the Chicago Cubs' office today. Receipt of Marty's contract brought to 18 the number of players signed for 1939. Eleven have returned unsigned documents and one, Outfielder Hank Leiber, has not been heard from.

Four Yanks Sign

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The New York Yankees received the signed contracts today of three pitchers, one of them a promising rookie, and a veteran outfielder. Pitchers to fall in line were Oral Hildebrand, obtained from the Browns in a midwinter trade; Steve Sundra and George Washburn, who won 12 and lost 4, with Kansas City, of the American Association last year. The outfielder was George Selkirk.

Ernie Koy on Dotted Line

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Ernie Koy, husky outfielder purchased by the Brooklyn Dodgers from the Yankees for $15,000 last year, sent in his signed contract today. Although the exact terms of the document were not announced, Dodger officials said he was granted a substantial increase over last year's salary.

Columbus Ring Team Favored Over DeSales

Explorers in Debut At Turner's Arena; Terps at Virginia

Columbus University's ring team inaugurates its 1939 campaign tonight at Turner's Arena, engaging DeSales College, of Toledo, while Maryland's squad heads South for Charlottesville and tomorrow's twin bill with Virginia, and Catholic University awaits tomorrow's invasion by Duke.

Boasting a veteran array of material, Columbus is a heavy favorite over the Ohioans, although DeSales is reputedly vastly improved over last year when it dropped a 6-2 decision to the Explorers. Bud Brazzil, 240-pound heavyweight, and Dick Rosenfelder, lightweight, are the team's outstanding punchers.

Jim McNamara, Columbus mentor, last night named "Rube" Hayman as his heavyweight, and assigned lanky Jimmy Willis, who resembles Bob Fitzsimmons in action, to the lightweight class. Both, he believes, will hold their own with the visitors, even though Hayman will spot his opponent 60 pounds.

The complete Columbus line-up reads as follows: 120 pounds, Phil Appel; 127 pounds, Leo Marcopolus; 135 pounds, Willis; 145 pounds, Buddy Lazier; 155 pounds, Dave Schlaifer; 165 pounds, Bill Crum; 175 pounds, Jim Brown, and heavyweight, Hayman. DeSales will have Al Pedro at 120 pounds; Eddie Paluch, 127 pounds; Rosenfelder, 135 pounds; Barney Quilter, 145 pounds; George Graff, 155 pounds; Bob Fournier, 165 pounds; Hugh Graff, light heavyweight, and Brazzil.

Despite the fact that it lost to Maryland and South Carolina in previous matches, Duke will be gunning for an upset at Catholic University's expense. The Cardinals will present a newcomer at the 120-pound weight in Ricardo Fernandez, whose scheduled debut against Maryland last week was mysteriously postponed.

Like its host, Duke is stronger in the heavier classes, dominated by Rose Bowl gridmen who figure to give their opponents a rough evening. Capt. "Chuck" Kasik, welterweight; Ed Morel, light-heavyweight, and "Pete" Brooks, heavyweight, are the outstanding Duke mittmen. Brooks, incidentally, lost to Morty Steinback, of Maryland, after putting the Terp ringman on the floor for a count.

Maryland's squad is expected to hoist anchor for Charlottesville late this afternoon, arriving early enough to get a good night's rest. Coaches Heine Miller and Capt. Bill Maglin will chaperone a group of about 20, which includes both varsity and freshmen teams, managers and their assistants.

The freshman meet is scheduled in the afternoon, with the upperclass occupying the feature spot at night.

Two Teams Clash at Eastern Gym; Tech Faces Western

With the exception of Eastern and Anacostia High, all the public schools currently engaged in the interhigh basketball series go into action today. Four teams take part in the regular double-header listed for Eastern at 7:30, and the other two undertake outside opponents.

Roosevelt and Wilson, strong favorites to reach the schoolboy championship tournament later this month, feature the twin bill, playing the opening engagement. The nightcap brings together a couple of cellar dwellers, Western and Tech, fighting for a chance to move ahead.

Central plays the first of two games out of town, a match with Cambridge (Md.) High. The Mount Pleasanters go to York, Pa., Saturday.

Gonzaga's Purple cagemen, their chances of a Catholic Prep title almost gone, goes to Bethesda-Chevy Chase to meet the fast-improving suburban defenders. Another important and interesting court contest will be the clash of Mount Rainier, title claimant of Prince Georges County, and Montgomery Blair, strong Montgomery County contender. They meet at the Silver Spring gym.

'Bacon-to-Beacon' Slogan of Rooters For Bettina Today

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The threatened clash of a hypnotist and a "Hexer" won't come off, but the cash customers will be treated to just about everything else when Tiger Jack Fox and Melio Bettina battle for the New York State version of the world light-heavyweight championship tomorrow night.

First off, there'll be a parade from Grand Central station right into Madison Square Garden by some 1,200 Bettina rooters from Beacon, N. Y. They've adopted a slogan—"Bring the Bacon Back to Beacon"—and are red hot for the home town boy, despite the 5 to 12 odds favoring the Tiger in the 15-round bout.

Then, there'll be the turnout, which now promises a gate of over $35,000, although when the match was first made, Promoter Mike Jacobs wasn't sure there would be enough profit to pay for his latest set of store teeth. The Beaconites themselves bought up nearly $5,000 worth of tickets.

Boys Republic Wins

The Lyon Village Midgets suffered their first league defeat last night at the hands of Boys Republic No. 1. The score was 15 to 10. The victory allowed the winners to tie for the league lead.

Nation's Stars In Badminton Tourney Here

10-Hour Schedule Launches Event at 3 o'Clock Today

A ten-hour schedule of matches, starting at 3 o'clock this afternoon and running far into the night, comprises the first day's program for the second annual District of Columbia Open Badminton tournament at the National Guard Armory in Kensington.

Three women's singles matches will launch the tournament at 3 o'clock and following, in order, will be competition in women's doubles, men's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles.

Because of the presence of the American and Canadian champions, the men's seeded list was divided into home and foreign sections, with Walter Kramer, of Detroit, the United States titleholder, No. 1 on the former, and Erny Richardson, of Windsor, No. 1 on the foreign. Ken Quigley, Cleveland's eighth nationally ranking player, is seeded second to Kramer, and Bill Pinkerton, of Toronto, second to Richardson.

Wanda Bergman and Helen Gibson, national women's doubles champions, are seeded first and second in women's singles and No. 1 in doubles. Elinore Abbott Behr, Maryland State champion, is third seeded among the fair entrants, and Elizabeth Greene, of New York, fourth. Mrs. Bergman and Gil Carpenter, mixed doubles champions of the New York metropolitan area, are the ranking man and woman team.

Kramer makes his first start at 7 o'clock against Gould Morrison, of Baltimore, while Richardson meets Clinton Stephen, of New York. No local entrant is scheduled to meet a favorite in first-round play.

The pairings:

Eastern Five 29-to-9 Winner Over G.W. High

Losers Are Held to Three Field Goals; Lassisse High Scorer

Eastern High courtmen routed a previous conqueror, George Washington High, of Alexandria, 29 to 9, yesterday in the winners gym, limiting the visitors to three field goals.

The Lincoln Parkers, defeated by the Presidents by a 10 point margin earlier in the season, gained ample revenge with the 20 point lacing, led by Ralph Lassisse and Soup Hancock.

The visitors scored only two points in the first quarter and never threatened the Eastern advantage. Lassisse scored nine points to top Hancock by a single goal.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 2.—Mrs. J. Franklin Gross, of Washington, failed to survive the first round of match play in the annual Miami Biltimore women's golf championship here today. She bowed to Miss Carolyn Brown, of San Antonio, Tex., 3 and 2, in the third division.

Georgetown Prep Faces St. Albans Five

Two of the finest collegiate courtmen ever developed in the District will send their charges against each other today when St. Albans entertains Georgetown Prep at 3:30 p. m.

Coach Mickey Schonfeld, current high-scoring ace of the Heurichs and former G. W. star, is in charge of the host five, while the Little Hoyas are tutored by Ed Hargaden, former Georgetown star, and all Eastern Conference guard.

Co. F Winner

Company F tossers, of Hyattsville, defeated General Accounting Office, Postoffice Department, 34 to 26, last night at Hyattsville Armory. Martin was high for the winners, with 13 points. The Company F five entertains Fort Meade Sunday in the Hyattsville Armory.

Terps, Hoyas Navy Entered In C. U. Meet

Annual Event, March 4, Already Has 19 College Entries

With Catholic University's sixth annual indoor meet still more than a month away, entries are beginning to pour in from the Nation's leading colleges, Dorsey Griffith, Cardinal track coach, announced today.

Those who have already signified their intention of participating in the C. U. games March 4 are Navy, Maryland, Georgetown, Johns Hopkins, University of Delaware, Pennsylvania, Washington College, Western Maryland, Maryland State Teachers, Baltimore, Gallaudet, Washington and Lee, Virginia, St. Peter's, Villanova, Wake Forest, Seaton Hall, Westchester Teachers and LaSalle.

Coach Griffith expects a total of 25 colleges in the meet in addition to 15 high schools. Other colleges expected to participate are Penn State, Duke, North Carolina and New York University.

High schools which have accepted invitations are Eastern, Tech, Western, Central, Gonzaga, St. John's, Roosevelt, Anacostia, Washington and Lee, Baltimore Poly, Baltimore City College, Bel Air, Mount St. Joseph's Prep, Massanutten, Staunton, Wilson, Hyattsville and West Philadelphia Catholic High School.

Earl Petri, of Villanova, victor in the Abbey 50 last year, will defend his title.

Perhaps the most colorful event on the program is the football relay between grid stars of Catholic University, Maryland, Georgetown and George Washington. This event, in which a football is used instead of a baton, was captured by Georgetown last year in a thrilling and hilarious race.

Griffith is holding trials at C. U. to pick his team. The Cardinal mentor will be faced with the task of selecting virtually an entire team.

Pin Record Is Shattered By Miss Hart

Chi Sigma Bowler Rolls 3 366 Set As Her Team Wins

"Stimmy" Hart, of Chi Sigma No. 2, set a new season's record for the Inter-Sorority League last night when she rolled a set of 366 at the Petworth Alleys. Miss Hart also holds the best average in the circuit with 104. Chi Sigma No. 2 won three games from Beta Gamma to tie for second place.

SILVER SPRING LADIES

Bergman's Laundry jumped into the lead in the Silver Spring Ladies League at Silver Spring, sweeping three from Shepherd Park Restaurant, led by Dot Crawford's 343. Silver Spring Motor Sales, lost their top post by losing three to Reed's Refreshments, paced by Pauline Reed's 312.

Congress Wallpaper also scored a clean sweep, Ruth Rothgeb pacing them with a 318 set over Victoria Laundry, while Southern Oxygen scored an odd-game triumph over R. C. Cola, led by Mary Miller's 296.

LADIES FEDERAL

Helen King, rolling for Comptroller No. 1, cracked a 133 for game honors in the Ladies Federal League at Arcadia, while Miss Beck, Federal Housing, had high set of 341. Team high totals went to Treasury No. 1, 541 game and 1,559 set.

WAR DEPARTMENT

A 141 game by John Vogts, a member of the Washington Aqueducts, paced the War Department League at Arcadia, while Frank Pearson, Engineers, had a 357 set. Engineers also took team game honors with a 589 game and Statistics set high total with 1,646.

G. A. O. (A. & B.)

J. W. Miller topped the A and B division of the General Accounting League at Chevy Chase with a 140 game and 387 set, while team scores were Analysists and Diget, a 546 game and Review No. 1, a 1,560 set.

CONN. AVENUE LADIES

Laura Logan posted a 131 game in the Connecticut avenue Ladies League at Chevy Chase Alleys, but fell down in the other two to record a set of 291, best for the night. Orioles accounted for high team game and set with 455 and 1,316.

DEPARTMENT STORE

The second place Woodward & Lothrop bowling team, defending champions of the Department Store League, moved within 2½ games of first place when the Woodward team took the odd skirmish from the pace-setting Kann's last night at Recreation Alleys. Billy Kingsolver led the winning charge with 364. Henry Miller rolling 364 and Al Watson, with 356, were high for the losers.

Garfinckels, paced by Don Hardesty's 159-376, and Rex Stewart's 372, whitewashed Hecht Co., while Hahn Shoes took the odd tilt from the Raleigh Haberdasher despite Bob Althaus' 363.

In other matches Mortey Ingalls' 355 featured Jelleffs sweep over the Credit Bureau, while Lansburgh's grabbed two from Guy-Curran.

CAPITAL TRANSIT

Northern Bus remained at the top of the Capital Transit League at Takoma Alleys by sweeping all three from Track and Roadway, led by Paddle Throckmorton's 154 game and 312 set. The winners topped the tram totals with 636-1,735.

General Office remained a game out of the lead by blanking Southeastern, while Western Bus, led by Frank Burgess with 141-388, took the odd game from Mechanical.

Southern Bus won two from Navy Yard, Eastern took two out of three from Brightwood, Northern Car won two from Georgetown and Central Bus took two from Eastern.

Mt. Rainier League

Hugh Crawley, boss of the Mount Rainier Alleys, rolled a 137 game and 374 set in the Mount Rainier League, as Whelan's Bar-B-Q took two from Marcellino's Shoe Repair. The winners had a 608 game and 1,775 set.

Sirasia Drives to Neck Victory in Hialeah's Best Race

Meade Rides 4 Winners on Florida Card

Fleet Step Produces $196 Record Pay-Off; Continuity Annexes Day's Final Event

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 2.—An off-day program was offered here this afternoon, with the 7-furlong third contest, for 3-year-olds, the nearest thing to a feature event. W. C. Stroube's Sirasia, a son of Sir Gallahad III, needed all the help that the accomplished apprentice, Charles Charlton, could give him to drive home a neck winner. The bay colt was a $6.80 for $2 choice in the field of seven lesser lights. Mrs. C. Lyon's John's Heir was an easy second, four lengths in advance of Warren Wright's Sure Off. The time was 1:24 flat.

Four of the starters—Sirasia, Sure Off, Oversight, which finished fourth, and Chalmac—are eligible for the Flamingo Stakes, but their prospects at this time appear decidedly slim.

Moorland Stable's fleet step, pulled up in his last start and soundly beaten in races before that, won the seventh event at odds of $196.50 for $2. It was the longest straight price paid at the meeting.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MILK, $11.70, $7.80, $4.90; FLICKERING, $10.00, $6.80; FAIR, $5.30.

MILK, going in her best form, bettered her position steadily in the final three furlongs, came through between the leaders in the stretch and got up in the last strides. FLICKERING, a forward contender all the way, assumed a brief lead after passing the furlong pole, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. FAIR, quickest to find her stride, displayed the most speed, but drifted about after entering the stretch and hung in the final drive. HAZEL NUT, hard ridden, held on well in the stretch run. FLYING VICTORY, away poorly, failed to make up any ground.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:32½. Winner, H. R. Bain's b. c. (3), by Gallant Fox—Stony Stare. Trained by R. H. McCreery. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:11 2-5, 1:24 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STONEY BRUSH, $5.80, $3.70, $2.80; DAY OFF, $3.50, $3.10; TALL STORY, $4.60.

STONEY BRUSH, away forwardly, assumed command in the opening furlong, was cleverly rated in front until well straightened into the stretch, then drew out under light urging to win with a little in reserve. DAY OFF, in the thick of contention in the run down the backstretch, was pinched back rounding the turn, was taken to the outside entering the stretch and finished soundly, but never threatened the winner. However, the race ought to benefit him. TALL STORY, a keen factor throughout, faltered slightly when it came to a drive, yet held the others safe. CORONADO closed stoutly.

Daily Double, Milk and Stoney Brush, Paid $52.90.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Rubinoff. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:02. Winner, W. C. Stroube's b. c. (3), by Sir Gallahad III—Anastasia. Trained by M. M. Harrison. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:11 2-5, 1:24.

BIG FLAG	(Wright)	113	6	1	1ʰ	2¹	2ʰ	7	7	27.15

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIRASIA, $6.80, $3.20, $2.50; JOHN'S HEIR, $3.70, $2.80; SURE OFF, $2.70.

SIRASIA, slow to get going, improved his position gradually on the outside in the final three furlongs and, responding with determination when the final issue came, outlasted JOHN'S HEIR. The latter raced BIG FLAG into submission in the early stages and drew out on the stretch turn, but faltered when challenged. SURE OFF, unable to secure clear racing room in the early stages, slipped through on the inside in the stretch run and wore OVERSIGHT down in the last strides. OVERSIGHT bettered his position steadily rounding the turn, but weakened through the stretch as if in need of a race.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:34. Winner, B. Lewin's b. g. (5), by Sir Gallahad III—Anastasia. Trained by M. Shapoff. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46, 1:11.

INDOMITABLE	(Steffen)	117	6	7	8⁴	8	9	9		7.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNIGHT GALLANT, $4.90, $3.60, $2.50; SHE'S RIGHT, $9.70, $5.40; SUNTIME, $3.80.

KNIGHT GALLANT broke off stride, moved into contention swiftly on the outside and disposed of the leaders at the furlong pole, but was kept under steady pressure to the finish. SHE'S RIGHT, a forward contender all the way, closed gamely to punishment and outlasted SUNTIME. The latter, away tardily, bettered his position gradually and closed with a belated rush. LENPOLA stole through on the inside all the way and finished stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:03½. Winner, Mrs. W. Hodson's ch. g. (6), by Polymelian—Griselda. Trained by W. Hodson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:11.

RODWYN	(J. Renick)	109	4	2	3½	6	6	6		37.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANSCO, $7.70, $3.40, $3.50; POSTERITY, $4.80, $4.60; MARSON, $6.50.

MANSCO, slow to find his stride, improved his position rapidly on the extreme outside after entering the stretch and wore POSTERITY down in the last strides. POSTERITY forced a swift early pace and raced ISAIAH into defeat, took command through the stretch, but faltered when COULD not withstand the winner's challenge. MARSON, vigorously urged and going well up all the way, closed in game fashion. ISAIAH had to be hard ridden to gain the lead in the run down the backstretch and set a rapid pace while saving ground, but weakened suddenly in the last sixteenth mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:33½. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's b. g. (6), by Toro—Abbatisa. Trained by A. E. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:12 4-5, 1:38 3-5, 1:58 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABBATORO, $6.30, $5.00, $3.30; CELESTINO, $6.80, $4.20; LIFE GUARD, $3.90.

ABBATORO, under stout restraint and saving ground in the opening five furlongs, took command at his leisure leaving the backstretch, shook off CELESTINO entering the stretch and won with speed in reserve. CELESTINO, going in his best form, forced a steady pace and raced SEVENTH INNING into submission, continued gamely under punishment, but was no match for the winner. LIFE GUARD, rated off the pace while going wide, made a bold bid on the stretch run, but could not keep pace with the leaders. RED RAIDER, was under pressure all the way.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:04. Off 5:04½. Winner, Moorland Stable's ch. h. (5), by Misstep—Dottie Vandiver. Trained by A. A. May. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLEET STEP, $196.60, $43.70, $18.20; HI-TIDE, $3.70, $3.00; KINDRED SPIRIT, $4.30.

FLEET STEP, displaying improvement, worked his way up while obtaining clear passage on the inside and, closing with determination under pressure, shook off the leaders in the final 70 yards. HI-TIDE, a factor from the start, was in tight quarters on the inside, swung around the leaders entering the stretch and finished gamely to outlast KINDRED SPIRIT. The latter, used up racing MIXED WEATHER into defeat, faltered in the final drive. MAESTROM, well up on the outside throughout, faltered through the stretch.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:36. Off 5:36. Winner, Mrs. M. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONTINUITY, $9.30, $4.60, $4.00; ESPINACA, $9.50, $6.00; PANORAMA, $3.50.

CONTINUITY took command at the start, shook off repeated challenges from her opposition and, continuing determinedly, outlasted ESPINACA in the final drive. ESPINACA, under mild restraint while racing on the outside early, made a game bid, but could not overtake the winner. PANORAMA, well up in the first half mile, dropped back rounding the lower turn, came again under punishment and held TOBACCO safe. The latter dropped far out of contention in the early stages, but closed resolutely under punishment. PEEDEEQUE lacked speed and was never a serious threat.

Dear Al:

A reader who had plenty of time to scribble up several sheets of paper but not enough to sign his name, gives me a load of overripe raspberries because I had some identical words in this column which had appeared in the Daily Racing Form a couple of days before. "Perhaps you don't know it, but every line in the Daily Racing Form is copyrighted," he or she writes. Well, in the first place Hialeah Park has one of the most efficient publicity departments in the country. It sends out many pages of well-written and authentical news and features. It is all good reading and, at times, just can't be improved. Whenever I run across one that would be of interest to the Benningites I do what the newspaper gang calls "hop a cripple." In other words, I use the Hialeah publicity. Just for comparison I have had these "handouts" in this column before they appeared in the Daily Racing Form. Sometime back, I used a nice piece of copy sent out by Frank Menke, who is doing the publicity work for the Kentucky Derby only to find that another local race writer had taken the same stuff and attached a by-line. I wrote another column for the next edition. There is an old saying around the race circuits which goes, "Don't spoil the racket." Well, I can still write my share of racing news and I will continue to give you the publicity department writings when they are of enough importance to warrant it. In yesterday's Daily Mirror, Dan Parker has a column which compares Meade to Richard Whitney, the jailed president of New York Stock Exchange and says, "Keep Meade out of New York." It is a honey. Clocker Mike hit a new low today. He invested $30 in the bangtails and finished up the day mumbling to himself. The bankroll dropped back to $333.05 but Mike hopes to send it up again with $10 to win and $10 to place on Bob's Boys.

BILL.

First race—Ida Rogers seems the best suited of this group of rollicking juveniles. She has the speed, and I see no reason for mistakes. Pirate Ship is said to be a good one and probably will be close. Cross Vine breaks on the outside and should do some running.

Second race—Blue Fang, with 117 pounds up and Jockey Schmidl in the pilot's seat, gets my call in this sprint. This one has been working well and deserves a chance. Rosemain, an Arcaro mount, seems capable of giving the top one a tussle. The Jacobs entry of Lee S. and Cantwell should hold the others safe.

Third race—I'm going to string along with Don Meade and Ghost Train in this affair. Meade should get plenty of speed out of this one and take the shortest way home. Cobe has a high figure and Arcaro's riding should help. Epical is an in-and-outer and could score in this company.

Fourth race—Catechism has a fighting chance here, and I'm going to climb aboard. Donoso is slated for the saddle assignment, and he is as good as any boy on the grounds when on horses that figure. Top Queen turned in a rather surprising last and is a threat. Handiboy is good now and probably will find a place in the pay circle.

Fifth race—Maeline is the class here and just can't be overlooked. Any price will be a good one. Fast Work and Speedy Booger probably will battle it out for the place award.

Sixth race—Get Off is that fast colt from the Glenn Riddle Farm who I have been touting. Gets a moderate weight task and will have Wright aboard. May win at the first local asking. Balmy Spring picks up a load but is due to be a factor. Flying Lill may pick up the third money.

Seventh race—Bob's Boys, tossed in this with 103 pounds, is likely to be heard from. Needs only the right ride under these conditions. Go Home and Pastry are fairly consistent and should fill out the place and show positions on the results board.

Eighth race—Jezrell seems the best suited of those gathered for the day's finale. Likes the route and is fit as hands make horses. Woodwaac and Findon to chase the top one to the finish line.

Best bet—Maeline.

Santa Anita may lack a Hialeah flamingo or so, but it is the sports photographer's paradise when it comes to getting something besides horses on a negative. The Sierra Madre Mountains in the background add something that other tracks can't boast. This picture shows Ossabaw, winner of five steeplechases last year, showing that he can step on the flat.

Cotton Futures Irregular in Quiet Trading

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—New crop positions settled a little lower in a narrow cotton market today.

The moderate pressure resulted from Southern offerings which were taken by foreign and Wall street buyers. Trade support steadied near positions which closed unchanged to 1 point up. Distant deliveries ended 2 to 4 points lower.

Trading was restricted, reflecting determination of both buyers and sellers to travel light until Washington gives some cue as to probable action in dealing with the cotton situation.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures dropped sharply today in active trade. Secretary Wallace's statement that lower hog prices were likely in the future brought new seasonal lows in lard, which in turn were reflected in cotton oil. Heavy commission house liquidation and stop loss selling were absorbed on the retreat by trade houses.

Final prices were 8 to 17 points net lower on sales of 253 lots. March, 6.79@6.81; May, 6.94; July, 7.02@7.00; September, 7.07@7.02.

Brokers' Loans Drop $39,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $642,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $39,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $611,000,000.

Wheat Prices Hold Firm In Slow Trade

Closings Are Little Higher as Volume Dwindles

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Wheat trade was unusually listless today, with prices only a shade higher after bobbing within a narrow groove throughout the session.

Pit business was at a standstill much of the time. Speculative interest was at a minimum and filling of many orders from the grain trade was slowed because of the small volume.

Strength at Liverpool, where prices closed unchanged to ⅝ higher. After losing part of a wider advance, reports of frost damage in France, firmer Australian offers and improved United Kingdom demand for Argentine wheat were supporting factors.

After holding to ½ cent range, with May contracts confined to ¼ range, wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ higher than yesterday; May and July, 69⅛-69. Corn was unchanged to ¼ up; May, 50⅝-⅞; July, 51⅞; oats, unchanged to ⅛ higher; rye, ¼ up; lard, 5 to 8 lower.

Slow but Sustained Rise Sends Stocks 1 to 5 Points Higher Treasury Issues and Rail Bonds Rise

New York, Feb. 2.—Rail equipment, steels and utilities were marked up 1 to 5 points with other groups following more leisurely today. Sellers, either from holdings or for the short side, were on holiday and small but sustained buying which was fairly well distributed sufficed to bring about a rise of 0.74 point in the 100-stock average. This erased Wednesday's losses. Power shares were responsible for a quickening of the trading pace in the last hour when 250,000 of the day's total of 608,960 shares were traded.

Bonds had a good day, high grade rail and power descriptions ascending by bounds while six new highs for the year or longer were recorded in the Government list. Foreign exchange rates closely matched quotations of the preceding session.

Utility Shares Are Choice

Traders' choice of the utilities as a medium for bullish operations were based on the intangible feeling that the Administration has taken a cue from Neville Chamberlain in his dealings with the totalitarians and will pursue a policy of "appeasement" with the electrical interests. If this means that Washington contemplates a cessation of the campaign which has been waged these last few years against the private power groups, it would be an occasion for rejoicing.

Companies Wish to Sell

Unfortunately "appeasement" appears to be chiefly taking the form of wholesale buying by the Government of utility systems rather than a broad reconciliation, as between the bureaucrats and private managements, of their differences. It is quite natural, of course, that some companies have arrived at the point where they actually wish to sell. Over their heads is poised the club of Government competition.

Deals Affect Many

It is the same bludgeon which delivered blows against power rates and policies, fair or otherwise, during the whole period of the New Deal. Shareholders, in many cases, would heave a sigh of relief at a sale for cash, but the crux is that these gigantic deals affect a vastly larger group than stockholders in the enterprises—the whole citizenry, in fact. Each purchase puts the Government deeper into power ownership and operation. Experience fails to show where such activities can benefit the American people.

On the one hand analyses of TVA rates disclose that, on equal footing with the privately operated power system, rates to the public would be as high if not higher; on the other, each acquisition of this sort removes a source of revenue to the Treasury with a concurrent increase of the burden on remaining taxpayers. Aside from indications that these further excursions of the Government into public ownership are certain to add to Federal deficits, there is the additional certainty that the entering wedges of State socialism are being driven deeper.

A. T. & T. Spurts Forward

American Telephone interested tape watchers with a spurt of 5⅜ points on transactions of only 2,500 shares. Investment demand for this stock has been consistent since the first of the year and semi-official advices are that current earnings are more than sufficient to cover dividends. Loft led the list with a jump of better than a point on Pepsi-Cola expectations. Appellants on the award to Loft, appearing during the day in Delaware courts, asked modification and not reversal of the late Judge Josiah Wolcott's ruling.

Five of the 15 most active shares were in the power group, including some of the very low-priced issues, and all gained sharply. Old favorites frequently traded included General Motors, up 1⅜; Steel common, up 2⅛; Bethlehem, up 1¾; General Electric, up 1⅝, and Chrysler, ahead 2.

Bond Trading Advances

Listed bonds of all descriptions were in modest demand today, and with offerings scarce the gains were sizable. United States Treasury bonds and best utility issues led the investment section upward, with numerous record highs registered.

Speculative railroad and other bonds advanced readily in the domestic list, while foreign dollar bonds also continued to recover from last week's war scare selling. Turnover in all issues was $6,380,000.

Treasury Issues Score Gains

Long term United States Treasury bonds were 1-32 to 17-32 points higher on the day, with eight fresh highs recorded and all other indicative issues flush with previous tops. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations were better. The two issues of Telephone debentures moved easily to new highs on the buying wave, and sizable gains also were recorded in power and light bonds of best ratings. Rail and industrial bonds in high classifications were in more modest demand.

Junior Rails Higher

Secondary railroad bonds showed numerous advances of fractions to more than 2 points. Some investment money again seemed to be moving into the better mortgages, owing to the scarcity of investments. Borderline rails and default issues also improved. Utility holding bonds shared in the general advance, as did the industrial convertibles which afford access to equities and interest in the meantime. A little enthusiasm was worked up for cheap special groups.

Chilean bonds remained soft in the foreign division, owing to the earthquake. In other Latin-American default bonds a sharp rally developed, with Brazilians leading the movement. Japanese bonds were in keen demand, possibly for sinking fund requirements. The flurry in German bonds showed signs of ending, while Italians were steady. Best grade foreign issues held to previous figures.

District Loan Group Marks 28th Birthday

Connecticut Mutual Life

Substantial gains in all phases of its business were achieved during 1938 by the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co., according to the annual report of its president received by John L. McElfresh, general agent in Washington for the company.

Insurance in force is now at the highest point in the company's history, standing at $1,013,089,959, an increase over the previous year of $33,948,891. During the last four years insurance in force in the company has shown a gain of more than $120,000,000.

New life insurance sales for 1938 were 4.8 per cent ahead of 1937. "This is an outstanding record," stated Mr. McElfresh, "inasmuch as the sales for the life insurance industry as a whole were 13 per cent under the 1937 total." Premium income of the company was $41,354,782, as compared with $40,239,763 for the previous year. Total income shows a 3.8 per cent increase for the year and is $60,866,359. Admitted assets for the company, Mr. McElfresh explained, are also at an all-time high, now standing at $336,215,698, an increase over 1937 of $23,981,905.

Payments to policyholders in 1938 were $25,729,864, of which $4,549,784 was in dividends. Net return from invested funds was 3.84 per cent, a slight increase over the 1937 yield. As additional security to those holding contracts of the company, the surplus was increased from $11,100,968 to $11,677,010.

A. B. A. Regional Conference

A complete program has been received from the American Bankers Association's regional conference at Columbus, Ohio, February 9 and 10. The theme will be "Meeting Public Needs in Banking," and President Philip A. Benson, of the association, will be in charge. Other speakers will include D. J. Needham, of this city, general counsel of the association; Harold Stonier and William A. Irwin.

While Washington has been placed in the Columbus territory, numerous local bankers are making tentative plans to attend the conference in New York in March. Arthur J. Linn, comptroller of Hamilton National Bank, will be one of the speakers on the New York program.

Jesse B. K. Lee, Retired Chief of Ordnance, Dies

Relative of General and of Washington Was Man of Many Studies

Jesse B. K. Lee, 70, of 7084 Eastern avenue northwest, retired Chief of Ordnance at the Navy Yard, died yesterday at George Washington University Hospital. A native of Washington, he was a member of the Oldest Inhabitants Club.

The son of William Lee and Jane Sinnott, he was related to both George Washington and Robert E. Lee. He bore a strong personal resemblance to Washington.

Mr. Lee left high school at the age of 16 to work as a copyist in the Navy Yard, but studied at night school. He had an A. B. and M. A. degree from George Washington University, studied medicine for two years and law for four, was admitted to the District bar as a young man, and was also a graduate accountant.

Mr. Lee also progressed in one year through three lodges of Masons; the New Jerusalem Blue Lodge, the Columbia Chapter of the Scottish Rite and the Washington Commandery, Knights Templar. He had passed 24 degrees of Masonry at the age of 21.

One of the oldest members of the District National Guard, Mr. Lee was also a member of the Corcoran Cadets, which he joined at the age of 18.

Mr. Lee was a member of the Sojourners Club. He had been vestryman, church school teacher and superintendent of the Sunday school, director of the choir, and treasurer at Trinity Episcopal Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary C. Lee, brother, Harry E. Lee, and two uncles, William and Joseph Sinnott, all of this city.

Services will be tomorrow at 2 p. m., at Trinity Episcopal Church. Rites at the grave in Rock Creek Cemetery will be in charge of the Masonic order.

Funeral Services Set Today for F. A. Butler, 83

Services for Frederick A. Butler, 83, retired employe of the Standard Oil Co., will be held at 2 p. m. today from the Thomas F. Murray funeral home. Mr. Butler died Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. P. McGrath, Hyattsville, Md.

A native of Montrose, Va., Mr. Butler for many years served as supervisor at St. Elizabeths Hospital. He joined the Standard Oil Co. in 1898 and retired in 1918. Mr. Butler was a member of the United Order of Junior Mechanics.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Elizabeth Butler; four daughters, Mrs. McGrath, Mrs. Nellie A. Dean, Mrs. Charles Hutton and Mrs. Marjorie Mathews, and two sons, Lingan A. and Frederick S. Butler.

Sheriff Funeral To Be Today; Rock Creek Burial

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. today in Lee's Funeral Home for Clement William Sheriff, who died Tuesday. The services will be followed with rites in Holy Name Church with interment in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Sheriff held membership in the Holy Name Society and the Benning Citizens' Association and was a charter member of the Clan Gregor Society of America. For many years he was treasurer of the Maryland State Society. He also was a member of the Southern Maryland Society.

Surviving are the wife, a sister, Mrs. Isabelle S. Young and a brother, George B. Sheriff, of Atlantic City, N. J.

Michael Kelley's Funeral to Be Held Here Today

Services for Michael C. Kelley, 73, retired cabinet maker in the Department of Agriculture, who died last week in Miami, Fla., will be held at 9 a. m. today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Teresa McMahon, 1241 Shepherd street northwest, and will be followed by a requiem mass at 10 a. m. in St. John's Church, Forest Glen, Md. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

Mr. Kelley was a native of Laytonsville, Md. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nonie C. Kelley; three other daughters, Mrs. Margaret Barrett, Mrs. Cecilia Stockstill and Miss Helen Kelley, and four sons, James L., Thomas L., Marvin E. and Norman A. Kelly, all of this city.

Funeral Tomorrow For Mrs. McNelly

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. for Mrs. Jane Amelia McNelly, 95, at her home, 1458 Fairmont street northwest, where she died Wednesday. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. McNelly, who had been ill since Christmas, was the widow of Matthew McNelly, a shoe merchant. She leaves a son, William, and a daughter, Mrs. Hattie Williams, both of Washington.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. The National Metropolitan Bank of Washington, as Committee of the Estate of Clifton Sobers, Lunatic, Plaintiff, vs. Clifton Sobers et al., Defendants, Civil Action, File No. 782. Order for Publication against absent defendants. To Clifton Sobers, Lillian Skeete, Martha Griffith, Albert Sobers, Ivy J. Bapta, and to all whom it may concern: Please take notice that pursuant to an Act of Congress approved April 8, 1935, a complaint has been filed in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia by the National Metropolitan Bank of Washington, Committee of the Estate of Clifton Sobers, lunatic, alleging that Clifton Sobers disappeared from the District of Columbia on or about October 15, 1921, since which time he has not been heard of or from, and asking for the appointment of a receiver to take possession of the property and funds held for the absentee by the National Metropolitan Bank of Washington, as committee aforesaid and the distribution of the same in accordance with law. Accordingly, it is by the court this 25th day of January, A. D. 1939, ordered that the said Clifton Sobers, Lillian Skeete, Martha Griffith, Albert Sobers, Ivy J. Bapta, and all whom it may concern, shall appear in said court in this cause on or before the FIRST DAY OF MARCH, 1939, to show cause, if any they have, why a receiver of the aforesaid property and funds should not be appointed to hold and dispose of the same as provided by law and prayed by said complaint: provided, that a copy hereof shall be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Post and the Washington Law Reporter prior to said return day; otherwise, said court will proceed with the disposition of the said property as provided by law. Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Card and mathematical geniuses are constantly trying to make some improvement upon the game of bridge which will fill their pockets with gold and throw the nation into a panic, as did the change from auction to contract several years ago. But no one person conceived that change. It came about gradually as a natural development.

One great flaw in the various concoctions that have come our way during the last few years, including five-suit bridge, has been that without exception they were more complicated than the original game. If we study history we will learn that each time a change in the game of bridge has been accepted it has been one of simplification—from whist to bridge, with its dummy; from bridge to auction, with its bidding; from auction to contract, with its bidding limitations and higher scoring values, each step making the game simpler in performance, more difficult in execution.

Thus, reflecting upon past experience, five-suit bridge, as other lesser abortions of the game, died a very natural death. In England it is still being given blood transfusions and will probably continue a fitful existence until their majesties, the King and Queen, throw away their five-suit decks.

As long as contract can provide such fascinating problems in bidding and play as those shown in today's hand there is no danger of its being supplanted.

A small slam at no-trump was made, doubled, by South through a progressive squeeze on the West hand. It is contributed by E. N. M. and it was played at the Union League Club. E. N. M. said that it particularly interested him because only in books heretofore had he seen this type of squeeze, in which declarer's two hearts became winners.

Opening lead: 6 ♣

The bidding by both the offense and defense was questionable. North should have bid his club suit before his spades to indicate the relative length of the two suits, in which case the pair probably would have reached six clubs, which can be made without spectacular play. West erred in doubling, forestalling a losing finesse into his hand and inviting declarer to try for a squeeze.

In the play West was helpless. He opened his singleton club. Declarer won and ran the rest of his club tricks, discarding a low diamond, a spade and a heart from his hand. West, attempting to protect what he could, let go two spades, two diamonds and a heart. A diamond was then led from dummy, the ace cashed and West thrown in with a third lead of the suit. West won the diamond king, but had to concede the balance to South, as the long diamonds were established.

Even if West elects to discard differently, South can always make his contract, and an extra trick can be won if he dares to double finesse the spade suit.

The Union League Club player made his bid by taking six clubs, two spades, three diamonds and a heart.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

AGRICULTURE Department has adopted the policy of wooing the best products of the universities and colleges—just as big-time private industry has done for years. The personnel officers have arranged with the Civil Service Commission to consolidate examinations for junior professional positions and bring them to the graduates and the general public at an appropriate time before annual graduations.

This is something new in the service. The procedure will be painstaking. The department even intends having special interviewers talk things over with the most likely prospects for agricultural scientific jobs. The interesting feature is the groundwork already laid to sell the idea of Government service to the top graduates. They have already been told that there is a career in agriculture—that the Agriculture Department is the world's largest research institution. Its pay, grade by grade, matches the compensations offered by private industry. A real campaign to get the best grads is on.

This campaign underlay the recent lumped-up junior professional examinations the Civil Service Commission announced the other day. It all composed the department's first attempt to time exams with graduations and to take the cream from top of the can. But, again, the interesting part is how that sedate old lady, the Agriculture Department, is trying so desperately to sell its worth to the guys from the colleges. How much the department has done to advance science in the realm of agriculture must be known to the impending grads already and is known if they had enough interest in science to be in line for diplomas. But the department felt it must state its case, or private industry would get the men the Government could use as well.

Selections from questions asked the Federal Diary:

Q.—Do you think a person taking and passing a reopened examination has the same chance of getting a job as those taking a regular announced examination?

A.—Ordinarily, he has a better chance.

Q.—In writing to the commission about grades, does it help or hinder to write your Senator to have him look them up for you?

A.—This is an unnecessary step, as the commission will furnish you this information upon request.

Q.—If a man receives a grade and is placed No. 1 on the register and never gets a call, has that man any comeback? Can he find out why he was passed up?

A.—Under the regulations an appointing officer has the choice of three names. He is not required to select the first name or the second name, and if he selects No. 2 or No. 3, he is not required to give the other applicants a reason for his action. An appointing officer cannot proceed beyond the first three names, however, without making a selection.

NOTES: Mabel E. McPherson writes that a chess and checker club has been sponsored by the Treasury Recreation Association, with a nucleus of 14 members. They want to enlarge the group. Those interested can contact R. G. Morrisette (Procurement Division) or N. P. Wigginton, office of the Comptroller of Currency. The present members are:

D. K. Child (FCC); E. Cieslic (Procurement); A. B. C. Graves (Narcotics); Helen Kueken (Disbursing); I. S. Lipkovitz and M. E. McPherson (Comptroller of Currency); R. S. MacCready and R. G. Morrisette (Procurement); Pierre Pallamary (Public Health); P. E. Poole (Procurement); D. D. Pullen (Comptroller); Joyce Stanley (Research and Statistics); N. P. Wigginton (Comptroller), and Robert E. Wood (Printing).

CURRENT top thought in the WPA, NYA and other groups paid from emergency funds: To escape to other employment as soon as possible. The only reason there is no general exodus is because there are no available jobs elsewhere. When Congress denied civil service status to these groups the morale was cooked. They want out. If jobs opened widely and immediately, Congress would find these agencies with no personnel at all. They would, almost to a man, decamp in the twinkling of an eye.

Bob Burns Says—

My Grandpa Snazzy likes to follow the races, though he ain't picked a winnin' hoss yet. He came in the other night from the race track, all wore out an' excited. "What's the matter, Grandpa?" says I. "You're gaspin' for breath!" "I oughta be!" says Grandpa. "I got so sore at one of the hosses I bet on today that I told the jockey I could beat the hoss myself! This made the jockey mad an' he took me up on it. So I raced the hoss to the stable." "An' the nag beat you?" says I. "Not that plug!" says Grandpa. "I beat him!"

"You did!" says I. "Why, Grandpa, that's marvelous! It's too bad you ain't a hoss yourself! How much did you win by?" "There'll never be another old geezer like Grandpa Snazzy. He straightens up proudly an' points at his oversized beak. "By a nose!" he says, "An' I hope that learned the hoss somethin'!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Peter Sees a Chance

Who hesitates when chance appears
May fall the victim of his fears.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter ought to know about that. All his life long he has taken chances. If he hadn't he wouldn't be alive today. Any one who is hunted so much by clever and keen-witted folk as is Peter must take chances. It just has to be.

He was playing a game of in-and-out with Whitey and Snowy Owl. The stakes were high. At least they were high enough for Peter. They were his life against a good dinner. Peter could get through the high wire fence surrounding Farmer Brown's young apple orchard, but Whitey couldn't. No, sir, Whitey couldn't get through that fence. He had to fly over it, or sit on one of the posts and drop down on whichever side Peter happened to be. When he did this he always found Peter was on the other side.

At first Whitey kept Peter dodging back and forth through that fence with little opportunity to rest. Presently Whitey realized that he was gaining nothing.

Now as he sat there Whitey was not giving all his attention to Peter. He was constantly watching on all sides for any other possible dinner that might appear. Anyone who has the idea that Whitey, the Snowy Owl, can't see well in daylight just proves how little he really knows about owls, and Snowy Owls in particular. Whitey has marvelous eyes and he can see by day as well as by night.

So it was that he saw a Meadow Mouse come up out of the snow among some weed tops and begin to run about. At that distance you or I wouldn't have seen that Mouse at all, but Whitey saw it as plain as if close by. He could see the hole in the snow beside the stalk of a weed, the hole from which that Mouse appeared. He opened and closed his bill once. Perhaps it was his way of smacking his lips. Then he spread his great wings and was off. Those wings made no sound.

Now of course Peter Rabbit didn't see that Mouse. He didn't know why Whitey had so suddenly flown. He didn't wait to find out. Here was a chance. Peter took it. Away he raced, lippertylipperty-lip, close to the fence. He was making for the opposite corner, the corner nearest the Green Forest. He got there just as Whitey returned to the post from which he had flown. His face wore a satisfied look. He is very fond of Mice.

He looked down where Peter had been squatting. Peter wasn't there. A quick look around discovered Peter's brown form bobbing along toward the opposite corner. Instantly Whitey was in the air and after him. Without turning his head Peter can look behind him. That is one reason that he knows exactly when to dodge an enemy who is at his heels. Peter saw Whitey coming and increased his speed. Then, just beyond the fence, he saw a small pile of brush. You should have seen Peter run! Yes, sir, you should have seen him run when he discovered that brush.

He didn't stop in that corner of the fence. He went straight through as if no fence was there. Lipperty-lipperty-lip he ran, and dived under that pile of brush just as the big white owl reached for him.

It was a close call for Peter. If he hadn't taken the chance to run when he did he never would have reached that pile of brush. Now he could rest in comfort.

As for Whitey, he walked around that pile of brush peering into it, snapping his bill. It was a most unpleasant sound. Peter didn't mind. He knew what it meant. It meant anger and disappointment, the former because of the latter. So Peter didn't mind. He was safe and he knew he was safe. He was safe because he had seen a chance when it offered and had taken it.

Embargo Critic Calls U. S. Ally Of Reich, Italy

Lawyers' Committee Head Publishes Plea To Roosevelt by 5,000

Henry T. Hunt, chairman of the Washington Lawyers' Committee on American Relations With Spain, said yesterday the Spanish embargo has made the United States "an active ally of Germany and Italy."

Hunt's statement accompanied publication of a memorandum, prepared by the association, signed by more than 5,000 lawyers, and submitted to the President two weeks ago.

The memorandum declared the President's power to lift the embargo was backed by rulings of the State Department and the Supreme Court. It said the original joint resolution setting up the embargo requires the President to revoke it when he finds the conditions which called forth the embargo have ceased to exist.

The memorandum said collapse of the non-intervention patrol and of the non-intervention pledges of other nations, and the attacks on peaceful shipping, have ended the embargo's effectiveness as a guarantee of peace for the United States.

The embargo, the memorandum said, "creates the very danger it is intended to avoid, creates those dangers by magnifying the international influence of the nations which freely ship munitions into Spain, giving those nations a dominant influence over Spain, Europe and Latin-America, and sterilizing the influence of the United States as a force for peace."

"In Latin-America particularly, the thought that in case of civil strife insurgents may obtain arms from the Fascist powers while the United States maintains a doctrine of non-intervention, operates today as a potent threat to the peace of this hemisphere."

Nazi Refugee Parley Ends in Optimistic Vein

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 2.—Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's personal representative, today initialed a secret document giving German reactions to a program for mass emigration of German Jews.

At the conclusion of three weeks of conversations here, George Rublee, American director of the intergovernmental refugee committee, expressed optimism, and said he hoped for a "very great improvement in the situation."

A German spokesman said he felt certain that if "but a few important nations with land available" accepted Rublee's proposals for planned mass emigration, the German government would be found "probably surprisingly generous" in making its contribution toward solving the problem.

He said he hoped Rublee's proposals would find favor at least with a few governments, but that he did not expect all the 32 nations in the governmental committee to agree to proposals which are understood to aim at opening up vast areas in certain countries for Jewish settlements.

Before leaving for London, Rublee issued a communique recapitulating the work of himself and his two aids, Joseph Cotton, jr., and Robert T. Pell, since they came here January 10.

"The conversations resulted in clarifying the committee's program so that Rublee will be able to give details of it to the international committee when it meets in London February 13," the communique said.

Judge Approves $3,000,000 Will of Horlick Heiress

Racine, Wis., Feb. 2 (AP).—Admission to probate of Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley's will, disposing of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 of the Horlick Malted Milk fortune, ended a long court fight today, but left to speculation the amounts principal beneficiaries would receive under an out-of-court agreement.

Judge Simpson approved the will shortly after W. Perkins Bull, Toronto, Ontario, barrister-historian, renounced a one-third residuary share in the estate, and William Horlick Sidley, 27, withdrew objections to his mother's testament.

Judge Simpson ruled the executors had shown by two reputable doctors that Mrs. Sidley was sane when she signed her will three months before she died at Bull's home last summer.

Bull's disclaimer stated he did not relinquish his interest in a specific bequest—$250,000 cash. The will left Sidley a similar amount and divided the residuary estate among Bull, Sidley and St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, Wis.

Townsend Plan Honesty Is Questioned

Rep. Sheppard Tells Hearing 'I Couldn't Take It Any More'

By the Associated Press.

The House Ways and Means Committee heard an accusation of dishonesty against the Townsend old-age pension movement yesterday, and then got into a squabble itself in questioning a witness for a rival pension system.

Representative Sheppard (Democrat), California, sponsor of the so-called general welfare program for pensions of $30 to $60 a month for all persons over 60, said he had left the Townsend camp because of the "conduct of its national leader and many of its officers" and because "it was not functioning on what I analyzed as an honest basis."

Pressed for an explanation, Sheppard said pages of minutes describing meetings of the Townsend directors had been transposed to take care of various transactions. He did not specify what transactions he meant.

He also said that when the Townsendites sent "speaker after speaker on the public platform saying the people were going to get $200 a month when their own bill didn't carry it, I couldn't take it any more."

The committee was holding hearings on proposed amendments to the social security act. A noisy dispute broke out among committeemen when Republicans tried to get Sheppard to say he had not submitted the general welfare plan to the Social Security Board for analysis because he lacked confidence in the board.

Representative McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, wanted to know how far the Republicans expected to go in backing the Townsend plan, since some of them were pledged to grant the Townsendites full hearings.

Democrats and Republicans began yelling back and forth so loudly they were untintelligible, while Sheppard, who had taken a number of gibes from the committee, paced back and forth grinning. Finally Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, nearly broke a gavel restoring order.

Sheppard had started off by asserting it was "imperative" to obtain a more liberal distribution and increase in the Nation's buying power and that his bill would do that.

Three More Groups Plan Aid for Serum 'Banks'

The Junior Board of Commerce, the Herndon (Va.) Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star and the Columbia Country Club announced yesterday that plans were completed for card parties to be held during St. Valentine's week for the benefit of a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital.

Hundreds of other parties—in private homes, hotels, clubs and apartment house recreation rooms—are already scheduled for the week of February 13. All proceeds will go to equip and administer a modern blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital, where sufficient store of all types of blood for transfusions and serums for various diseases may be kept, ready for immediate use at any time.

To fill this community need immediately, Station WJSV and The Washington Post are sponsoring parties, large and small, throughout the Washington area at which guests will buy tickets at $1 each.

The Juior Board of Commerce party will be held at the Annapolis Hotel, Friday evening, February 17, at 8 p. m. Co-chairmen of the committee in charge of arrangements are Dr. Darrell Crain, chairman of the Junior Board's public health committee, and Dr. James A. Nolan, chairman of the youth welfare committee. Serving on the committees are the following:

Lyle O'Rourke, president of the Junior Board of Commerce; Stanley Pearson, John I. Dugan, Bernard Nees, Maury Young, Harry Peters, Charles Zurhorst, Laurence Miller, William Blum, Dr. Alexander Leonardo, Charles V. Koons, Hugh Nesbit, Harold Fangboner and Donald Sheehan.

The Columbia Country Club's party, with H. T. Peters, chairman of the club's bridge committee, in charge of arrangements, will be held Monday evening, February 13, in place of the usual duplicate bridge tournament.

Plans have also been made for tables of party bridge and poker. All proceeds, at $1 per ticket, to go for the establishment of the blood "bank."

Mrs. Lottie Meyer is chairman of a committee of members of the Herndon, Va., Chapter No. 55, Order of the Eastern Star, planning a party to be held at the Eastern Star Hall on February 9, at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Genevieve Hanes, worthy matron of the chapter, and other members of the committee in charge of arrangements are: Mrs. Mildred Kidwell, Mrs. Anna Nachman, Mrs. Eudora Armfield, Mrs. Edna Bready, Mrs. Lavinia Harrison and Miss Edith Rogers.

All tickets for the affair are for sale at the counter on the first floor of The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest, at $1 each. Mail orders—with check, money order or cash inclosed—will be filled immediately. The tickets are large, red hearts, with space for each guest's name.

Wood Quits Post On D.C. Committee

Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday resigned from the House District Committee, an assignment he has had four years, in a letter to Speaker Bankhead.

He explained that pressure of business on the Labor and War Claims Committee necessitated the action. It is doubtful that the vacancy will be filled as the committee already was three short of its quota.

Navy Puts 5 Ships On Auction Block

By the Associated Press.

The Navy put the former hospital ship Mercy and five other auxiliary craft on the block yesterday. Bids on the ships, which have been stricken from the active list, will be received until February 28.

The Mercy, a vessel of 9,450 tons, and four of the other craft are tied up at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

District's Taxing Of Outside Bank Accounts Studied

Legality of the District's taxing of out-of-town bank accounts of local workers claiming legal residence elsewhere was studied yesterday by Jo V. Morgan, member sole, District Board of Tax Appeals.

The tax involving the intangible personal property tax was questioned in an appeal from James Sweeney, a special attorney for the Department of Justice. The applicant stated he was a legal resident of Boston although he has lived here for 20 years.

Dr. Chester Pond, tax expert, who complete a study recently of the District tax structure has already recommended repeal of this tax.
